

Brooklyn Today May 10

Good morning. Today is the 130th day of the year. The Brooklyn Daily Eagle for May 10, 1901, carried an article with the headline, “Sheared Lambs Are Few in Brooklyn Offices.” The headline was referring not to sheep-shrearing, but to investors’ losses in the face of a “panic,” or downturn in the market. Apparently, Brooklyn investors had heeded the words of their brokers and not plunged in to the market over their heads.

Well-known people who were born today include singer Bono of U2, singer-songwriter Dave Mason, actor Gary Owens and author Barbara Taylor Bradford.

Mermaid Parade Swims Upstream

Coney Island USA’s Kick-starter campaign to raise money to keep the Mermaid Parade afloat, so to speak, seems to be working. As of Thursday, backers had pledged $36,690 toward the campaign’s $100,000 goal — and that was with 25 days to go.

According to Coney Island USA, the parade’s parent company, if the money isn’t raised, the zany parade may have to be canceled this year. The organization’s museum and performance on Surf Avenue was just about destroyed by Hurricane Sandy, putting the group under water.

The Mermaid Parade, which attracts up to 75,000 people, is one of the most popular events in Coney Island.

Huntley Sentenced in Brooklyn Court

From Associated Press

A former state senator who admitted embezzling nearly $88,000 from a state-funded nonprofit she controlled has been sentenced to one year and one day in prison by Brooklyn Federal Judge Jack Weinstein at Brooklyn Federal Court.

Shirley Huntley apologized for her crime as she was sentenced on Thursday. She pleaded guilty to mail fraud conspiracy and faced up to two years behind bars. She said she would try to use her remaining years to redeem herself to her family and community.

The Queens Democrat took office in 2007 and lost a re-election bid last year.

Government officials revealed last week that Huntley had been working with them to expose corruption, secretly recording nine people in her home. Two were Who's Next for Nets?

Prokhorov, King Begin Coaching Search After Disappointing Playoff

By John Torenli,
Sports Editor
Brooklyn Daily Eagle

WANTED: A highly motivated and motivational thick-skinned, media-savvy head basketball coach for an NBA franchise located in the heart of Downtown Brooklyn. Must have previous experience, be it as a head coach on the collegiate or professional level, or as a highly thought-of assistant. Must work well with others, especially high-paid players who sometimes "get down on themselves" in the heat of battle, and a billionaire owner with extremely high and sometimes-unrealistic expectations. Must understand that a poor month or two could result in immediate firing. Should be able to work well in front of large crowds, sometimes as many as 17,732 full-throated fans on a nightly basis. Should expect almost constant criticism and sniping from print and electronic media types, not to mention thousands upon thousands of know-it-all bloggers and tweeters. Those with an inability to close out playoff games when leading by as many as 14 points with three minutes or less to play need not apply. Starting salary: Approximately $3 to $6 million per year (negotiable). Resume should be sent to: Barclays Center, ATTN: Billy King or Mikhail Prokhorov, 620 Atlantic Ave., Brooklyn, N.Y. 11217.

Nets general manager Billy King and billionaire owner Mikhail Prokhorov won't be posting the above ad during their ongoing search for the next head coach of Brooklyn's first major pro sports franchise since 1957. But they will expect him to live up to some, if not all, of the listed criteria.

After spending last summer spending more than $330 million to build what they both thought was a team capable of competing for an Eastern Conference title, King and Prokhorov fired not one, but two head coaches by the time the Nets' historic first season in Brooklyn was complete.

Under the coaching combination of Avery Johnson and P.J. Carlesimo, the Nets compiled 49 wins (tied for the second most in franchise history), won more road games than any of their predecessors (24) and earned a coveted fourth seed in the playoffs, giving them home-court advantage in the opening round.

But a gut-wrenching Game 7 loss to the shorthanded but battle-tested Chicago Bulls at Barclays Center last Saturday night precipitated the jettisoning of Carlesimo. That paved the way for what figures to be the most important decision of the Nets' first full off-season since moving into their Downtown digs on the corners of Atlantic and Flatbush avenues.

"There's a lot of candidates out there at this time, and that's why we reacted quickly," King explained when asked why he waited only hours after Saturday's Game 7 home loss to Chicago to give Carlesimo his walking papers.

Those candidates, some of whom are still working the bench during the ongoing NBA playoffs, figure to get more than the casual once, twice over from King, who received a contract extension during the playoffs and just before the Nets were sent home for the summer.

Prokhorov, who delivered a conference-finals-or-bust mandate on Opening Night at the Barclays way back in November, is clearly intent not only on unseating the Knicks as New York's top NBA team, but also delivering the Nets their first-ever championship since moving over from the ABA in the mid-1970s.

A fresh offensive system, namely one $98 million point guard Deron Williams, can thrive in on a nightly basis, and an emphasis on overcoming long stretches of ineffectiveness -- something that plagued the Nets in 2012-13 -- are just two of the criteria the new head man must come equipped with.

"Long-term, we just need to get a good fit for us," King admitted. "It's not about marquee, we want the guy that we think can do the job the best. And going forward for the long-term."

While former Bulls and Lakers coach Phil Jackson, he of the 11 NBA championships, has already reportedly turned down the opportunity to be the next Nets coach, here's a list of resumes King and Prokhorov may be perusing over the next few weeks:

The New Kid in Town: Indiana Pacers assistant and long-time Jackson protege Brian Shaw is currently being touted as the next big thing climbing the coaching ranks. A player on three title-winning teams in Los Angeles before serving on Jackson's staff for two more championships, the 47-year-old Oakland native knows a thing or two about thriving in big-market conditions, albeit in the background rather than at the forefront. Shaw has culled great experience under Jackson and Pacers coach Frank Vogel. If Shaw wishes to implement Jackson's famed "Triangle Offense" here in Brooklyn, King will have to go to his "Big Three" -- Williams, Joe Johnson and Brook Lopez -- to see if they would be open to such a change after admittedly getting bogged down at times in Avery Johnson's and then Carlesimo's grind-it-out system. Mark Jackson's rapid success in Golden State and Tom Thibodeau's meteoric rise from the assistant ranks in Chicago certainly bolster Shaw's candidacy.

kick the tires on Rivers, but they're highly unlikely to drive him home and put him in their state-of-the-art Downtown underground garage.

The Brothers Van Gundy: Jeff and Stan Van Gundy, both of whom have led teams to the NBA Finals in previous head coaching stints, are both on the market. Jeff, who is well-estab-

The winner of 11 NBA Championships, Phil Jackson is reportedly not interested in being Brooklyn's next head coach.

Grumpy Old Men: Hall of Famers Larry Brown and Jerry Sloan figure to throw their hats in the ring at some point. Brown, a 72-year-old Brooklyn native, is known just as much for his coaching brilliance as his vagabond existence. Still the only man ever to win a national championship (Kansas, 1988) and NBA title (Detroit, 2004) as a head coach, Brown has held 14 different head jobs since 1972, including an ill-fated stint with the Knicks from 2005-06. Sloan, 71, captured two Western Conference titles during his years in Utah (1988-2011). But it may be his departure from that job, reportedly hastened by a clash with Williams, that will be closely scrutinized before he is considered for the Nets job. Williams has already said he would love to play for Sloan again. The question is, do the Nets want to replace Carlesimo with candidates that are nearly a decade older than the 63-year-old they just fired?

Dealing for Doc: Rumors persist that the Nets will try to shanghai Doc Rivers from Boston. Known for his motivational skills as well as his basketball acumen, the 51-year-old Rivers delivered the Celtics' first NBA crown since the Larry Bird era in 2009 and nearly won a second in 2010 before Boston fell in Game 7 of the Finals to Jackson's Lakers. With three years remaining on a five-year, $35 million deal, the Nets would have to dig deep into their current talent pool to orchestrate a deal for the veteran coach. They may lished as ABC/ESPN's top television analyst, has been noncommittal in his interest in the job thus far, clearly wishing to stay out of the race early. A proven winner with the Knicks, whom he led to their last Finals appearance as the No. 8 seed following the lockout-shortened 1999 campaign, Jeff also coached the Houston Rockets from 2003-07, missing the playoffs just once during that stint. Stan guided the Orlando Magic to the Finals in 2009, falling to Jackson's Lakers in five games, after a semi-successful 10-year run as an assistant and then head coach under legendary Miami Heat executive Pat Riley. Jeff is the more likely of the two to actually get a sniff of the Nets' job, but he'll have to show more interest in assuming the role as King and Prokhorov appear intent on filling it sooner than later. Also, Jeff's emphasis on defense may make him less attractive to a team that is clearly looking for a most dynamic offensive visionary.

Honorable Mention/Also-Ran: NBA head coaching retreads Mike Dunleavy, Nate McMillan and Scott Skiles may be somewhere on the Nets' radar if their prime candidates fall through. Let's not forget former Nets coaches Lawrence Frank and Byron Scott, both of whom figure to be working in TV for a while after failed stints in Detroit and Cleveland, respectively.

Good luck to all the candidates. We look forward to welcoming you to Brooklyn and questioning your every move.

The Nets would have to orchestrate a trade with Boston to bring Doc Rivers to Brooklyn for the 2013-14 season.

High-Tech Manufacturing Hub Opens at Navy Yard

By Rob Abruzzese
Brooklyn Daily Eagle

A giant, loft-like manufacturing space known as New Lab will open at the Brooklyn Navy Yard in 2015, and its future tenants were so eager to move into the huge space that its developer opened a "Beta Space" more than a year ahead of schedule to accommodate them.

City Council Speaker Christine Quinn, Borough President Marty Markowitz and Councilman Steve Levin were on hand along with the Brooklyn Navy Yard's Andrew Kimball and David Belt of Macro Sea, the company developing the space, to announce the opening of its Beta Space, or temporary home, on Thursday.

"Bravo to the Brooklyn Navy Yard on the completion of Macro Sea New Lab phase one and the opening of this state of the art manufacturing hub," Markowitz said. "Macro Sea's New Lab Beta Space provides exactly the sort of cutting-edge environment that has turned Brooklyn into Silicon Valley 2.0."

Macro Sea's vision for the Brooklyn Navy Yard is to turn Buildings 128, 28, and 123 into a Green Manufacturing Center that will preserve the history of the Yard as an economic and industrial hub. Ultimately it will be an 84,000-square-foot space that will serve as a high-tech design and prototyping center. It is expected to create approximately 300 jobs when completed. The Beta Space is acting as a "pilot" program where Macro Sea can get an idea of what the space will ultimately need when it opens a little more than a year from now.

"New York City needs to continue to do everything it can to attract next-generation manufacturing jobs to the five boroughs, and New Lab will help take us to the next level by providing space for entrepreneurs, engineers, and designers to collaborate and start new businesses," Speaker Christine Quinn said.

A dozen companies are expected to move into the Beta Space including 3D Systems, a company that manufactures 3D printers.

"New York City and Brooklyn have done a great job luring new technological companies to the city, and we are excited to be a part of this," said Cathy Lewis, chief marketing officer for 3D Systems. "We support it 100 percent, and we think it's a wonderful opportunity to be able to move in more than a year ahead of time."

Other companies expected to move into the Beta Space include Autodesk, Within Lab (a London-based design consultancy), 10xBeta, D.N.I., Columbia University's Laboratory for Applied Building Science, Hypersonic, Patten Studio, Terreform ONE, EcoSystems, Rock Paper Robot, Nea Studio, Bioworks Institute and IdeaSphere.

"Autodesk is excited to team with New Lab and to support the in-novated companies residing there," said Sarah Krasley, sustainable manufacturing lead of the company, which is supplying design and simulation tools to New Lab free of charge. "By providing digital design and simulation tools to these entrepreneurs, we are helping to foster the next generation of manufacturing in New York City."

Citi Bike Launch Set for Memorial Day

From Associated Press

After several postponements, Citi Bike, a joint venture between the city Department of Transportation and Citibank, has finally set a date for starting its bike-sharing program — Memorial Day.

The program will start with 6,000 bikes at 330 stations in Manhattan and those parts of Brooklyn west of Nostrand Avenue and north of Atlantic Avenue. There are plans to expand it eventually to 10,000 bikes and 600 docking stations in Manhattan, Brooklyn and Queens.

The bike-sharing program is called Citi Bike after a $41 million sponsorship from Citibank. It will be the largest program of its kind in the nation.

Thousands of people have signed up as Citi Bike founding members, paying the $95 annual fee for unlimited rides of 45 minutes.

Non-members can buy a 24-hour pass for about $10 or a seven-day pass for $25. That entitles them to an unlimited number of 30-minute trips.

Problems with the software and then Superstorm Sandy, which flooded a Citi Bike warehouse at the Brooklyn Navy Yard, twice delayed the program, which will have thousands of bikes throughout Brooklyn and Manhattan at hundreds of docks.

The bikes themselves are durable, three-speed aluminum bicycles with rain-protected fenders and nitrogen-filled tires.

Carroll Gardens Senior Sky-Dives Successfully, Defying Warnings

Special to Brooklyn Daily Eagle

Carroll Gardens great-grandma Carolyn Meiselbach checked off an item from her wish list when she leapt from a plane 13,500 feet above upstate New York.

"I've had six strokes, I've beat cancer twice, and I've got osteoporosis, arthritis and diabetes," says the feisty Ms. Meiselbach. "I served six years in the U.S. Navy [during the Korean War era] and I raised my two sons as a single mother. I figured if I could survive all that, letting someone push me from an airplane would be a piece of cake."

Carroll Gardens for 24 years, added that many years ago, she took a course in parachuting, but because of problems with the class, she never jumped. For that reason, she says, it was always "unfinished business" for her.

She jumped at Skydive Ranch in Gardiner, N.Y., on April 24, 2013 at high noon, harnessed to a 60-year-old instructor. She has scheduled a repeat performance on her 80th birthday next October. So far, she has convinced 10 friends to sign up to jump on that date too.

Three of Meiselbach's medical doctors, two sons, six grandchildren and one great-grandchild advised against the jump, but she was determined to experience a new adrenaline rush. Prior to the jump, Meiselbach's greatest thrill was celebrating Mother's Day each year zooming through Brooklyn on the back of her son's motorcycle.

Meiselbach, who worked for the U.S. Army for many years after serving in the Navy, landed with barely a scratch. The only bruise was on her chest where the parachute harness rubbed against her pacemaker.

Wells Fargo Program To Help Homebuyers

Wells Fargo has instituted a program, CityLIFT, to provide $9.5 million to help eligible homebuyers with down payment assistance grants to buy homes in the Bronx, Brooklyn, Newark and Jersey City

The effort includes homebuyer education classes and down-payment assistance grants of $30,000 in the Bronx and Brooklyn and $15,000 in Newark and Jersey City.

The CityLIFT program will include a free homebuyer workshop on Friday, June 7, from 10 a.m. to 7 p.m. and Saturday, June 8, from 10 a.m. to 7 p.m., at Pier 94 in Manhattan.

"New homeowners are coming to Brooklyn in droves because our neighborhoods are bustling with activity and excitement," said Brooklyn Borough President Marty Markowitz, a supporter of the program. "CityLIFT will help those who want to live here with the resources to get started – and with education on the home purchasing process. This is a win-win for everyone."

The program was developed in connection with the 2012 settlement with the U.S. Department of Justice, and is a collaboration between Wells Fargo Bank N.A. and NeighborWorks America.

REVIEW AND COMMENT

When Tragedies Strike, Time For Neighborliness

Two big news events within a month – the Boston Marathon bombings and the Cleveland kidnappings – have led to much hand-wringing over whether anyone who knew the perpetrators might have been able to stop these horrific acts.

Were the neighbors or associates of the suspects as caring or alert as they might have been to spot troubling behavior – and to do something about it?

In hindsight, it would be easy to say “no.” In both cases, there were possible trigger points in which someone might have played the role of “brother’s keeper.”

The Muslim mosque in Cambridge, Mass., could have been more diligent in how it dealt with bombing suspect Tamerlan Tsarnaev as he became more radical and belligerent, condemning the United States. The mosque did throw him out. But it didn’t contact police. And its members didn’t engage him in such a way as to help him with his conflicted feelings of identity and his family difficulties.

And even though a few people in the Cleveland neighborhood told police of odd behavior of the three Castro brothers charged with kidnapping the three women, many neighbors wonder if they should have known more – or done more. Should they have tried to befriend the brothers, for example, or kept a closer eye on activities in the house?

Such speculation strikes at the heart of how successfully an individual in any group – a neighborhood, a religious setting, or an office – forms a trusting relationship with others out of genuine goodwill yet also remains watchful for attitudes or behavior outside a particular norm. The line between trust and spying is easy to cross. Just ask any parent with a teenager.

After the 9/11 attacks, the Federal Bureau of Investigation and other government agencies have encouraged Muslim communities to be more alert to members who “self-radicalize.” New York City has the most sophisticated program of its kind, working with local Muslims to spot home-grown terrorists.

Nearly a third of would-be attacks by Muslims have been thwarted by information from American Muslims, according to the Triangle Center on Terrorism and Homeland Security. One terrorism cell was disrupted in Lackawanna, N.Y., for example, when Yemeni-Americans tipped off the FBI.

Law enforcement officials in general rely on citizens to care about their communities and to inform them of potential trouble. The caring is critical. But there’s also a danger in citizen vigilance. It can lead to racial, ethnic, or religious profiling. This is now an issue in the Florida court case of George Zimmerman, charged with killing Trayvon Martin, a young black man, while patrolling his neighborhood with a gun to keep it safe.

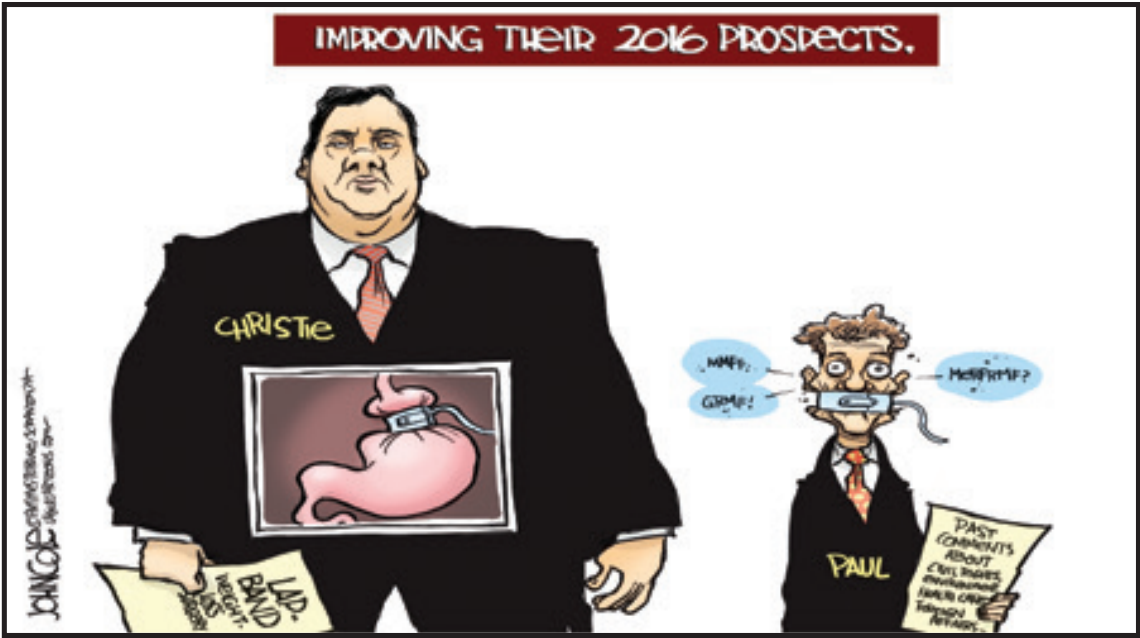

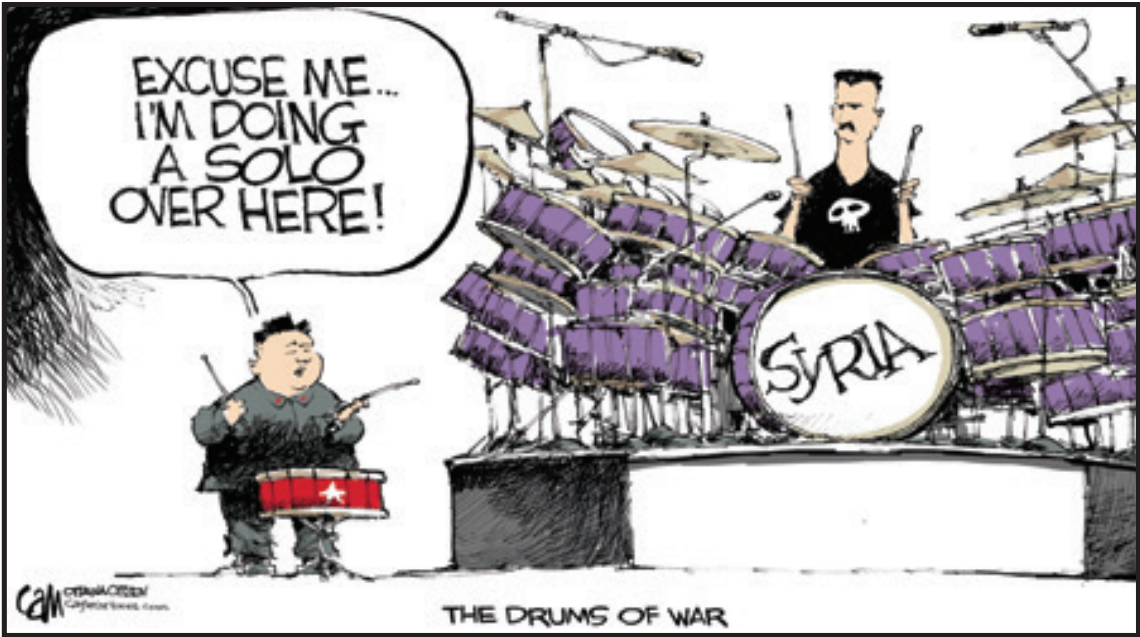

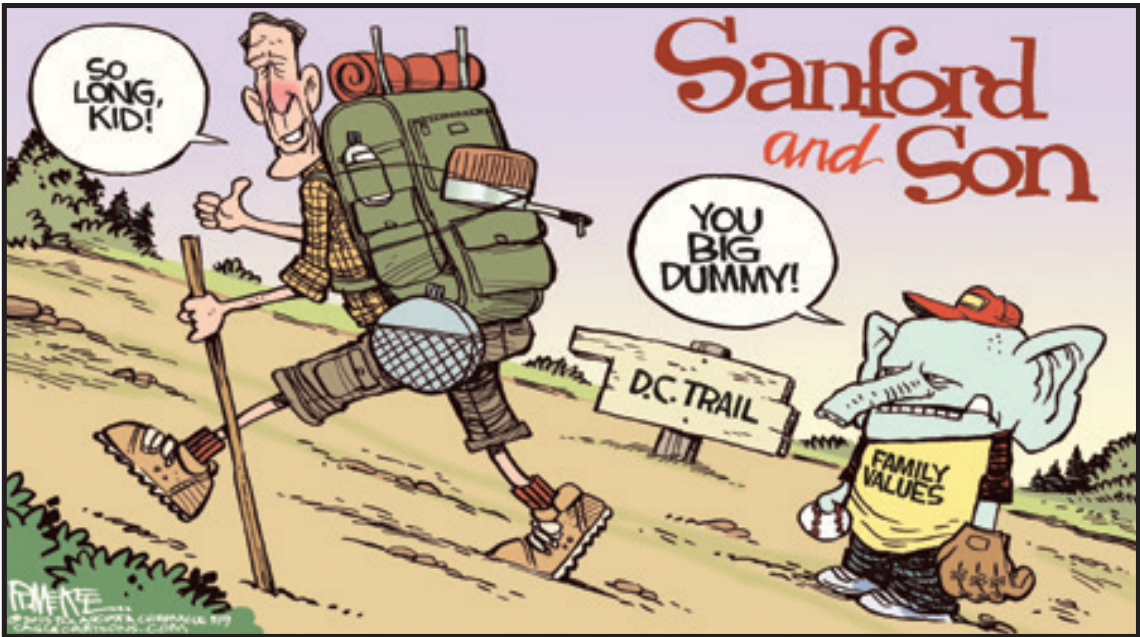

The biblical command to “love one’s neighbor” is based on a need to build societies that reflect the best qualities in human beings. Big tragedies serve as reminders of how much more we can all do – without crossing the boundaries of being too nosy.

After one of the Cleveland women, Gina DeJesus, was kidnapped in 2004, the estranged son of suspect Ariel Castro happened to interview her mother for a local newspaper. He was a journalism student at the time. He quoted her as saying that people had begun to look out for each other’s children.

“It’s a shame that a tragedy had to happen for me to really know my neighbors,” the article quoted the mother as saying. “Bless their hearts, they’ve been great.”

And indeed, it was neighbor Charles Ramsey who heard Amanda Berry’s pleas for help from the Castro house that led to the escape of the three women. He knew when not to look the other way.

A 375 Year Tradition

Market Day

Fred Wilklow drives his truck from upstate Highland, New York, to Borough Hall every Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday.

Since 1985, he and his family members have offered fresh fruit — and warm cider in winter — to Brooklynites at the Green Market there. At least 10 other stands join him selling fresh produce, flowers, baked goods and, occasionally, fish. About 10 years ago, the market moved from the steps of Borough Hall to Columbus Park in front of the Supreme Court building because their trucks were breaking the bluestone sidewalks.

The Green Markets that now seem ubiquitous around the city have a history going back to Dutch settlers.

In New Amsterdam, Market Street thronged with so many purveyors that a weekly "market day," Friday, was established in 1641 to regulate trade.

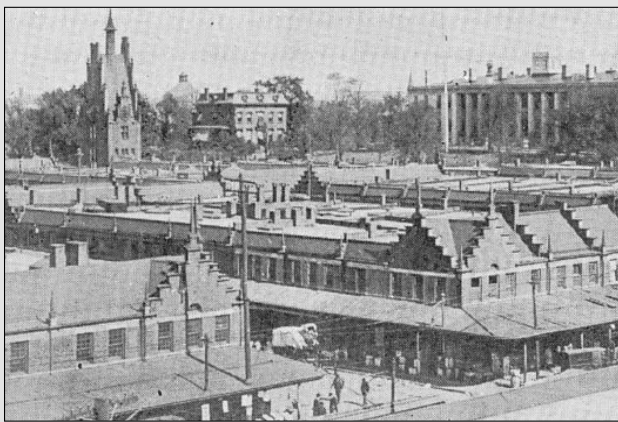

Unofficially, we still recognize the day before weekends with food ads that flood newspapers on Thursdays. By 1656, the first public market was built to cut down on unregulated peddlers, or "hucksters," as they were called.

Under British and American rule, the New York City Common Council authorized all markets, including slave markets.

By 1816, the Fulton Fish Market opened its stalls. The most important figure in nineteenth century markets was the butcher with his top hat and apron tied over a long-tailed coat. The most infamous one, William Poole, a gang leader of anti-immigration riots, was dramatized in the film, The Gangs of New York. Bill the Butcher was buried in Green-Wood Cemetery in 1855.

An age of perishable food and poverty drove many immigrant women and children to become itinerant peddlers of fruit and vegetables, candies and pies. By 1866, pushcarts flocked to Hester Street on the lower East Side. Brooklyn's market center became Wallabout Market.

The name Wallabout comes from the Dutch ("Waal-bogt") meaning "bend in the river." The section near the East River, settled in 1637 by Walloons (Flemish, today) was purchased for a farm by Joris Jansen de Rapalje, one of Brooklyn's first settlers. The neighborhood infamously became the site for the British prison ships moored there during the American Revolution.

The Wallabout Market area, from a Brooklyn Eagle post card.

PPS Site

As the Brooklyn Navy Yard occupied most of the area, the City of Brooklyn reserved a section at Flushing and Clinton streets for the Wallabout Market which remained there from 1890 until World War II.

In attempts to regulate markets, sanitation and health, a Pushcart Commission was established in 1905 which evolved into the Department of Markets by 1917. The administration of Mayor Fiorello LaGuardia abolished all open pushcart markets in the 1930s. With growth of supermarkets and refrigeration, crops no longer needed to be grown locally.

But the public still wanted fresh grown products rather than frozen or hothouse raised produce. Pressured by rural farmers who felt their businesses taken over by conglomerates, New York introduced the first Green Market farmers' market in 1976. Today, 16 markets are spread throughout Manhattan Island. The original at Union Square, open Mondays, Wednesdays, Fridays and Saturdays, attracts over 20,000 customers. Today, the Greenmarket Program is supervised by the Council on the Environment of New York City.

Green markets, some open all year, can be found in every borough. Brooklyn's Wallabout Market was replaced by the Brooklyn Terminal Market in Flatlands with over 24 vendors who sell retail and wholesale. Of Brooklyn's greenmarkets, the Borough Hall and Prospect Park markets are the oldest.

Split schedules allow farmers to grow and harvest their crops as well as sell them without a middleman. Most open at 8 a.m. Brooklyn markets can be found in various neighborhoods: Borough Hall, Albee Square at Fulton and DeKalb, Grand Army Plaza Prospect Park entrance, Windsor Terrace at Prospect Park West and 15th Street, Bedford-Stuyvesant at Nostrand and DeKalb, Williamsburg at Havermeyer Street and Broadway, McCarren Park at Lorimer and Driggs avenues.

The Astor Place Riots

On May 10, 1849, what is known as the worst theater riot in the history of the world occurred in Manhattan.

That evening, a demonstration in support of American and against English actors flared into a riot outside the Astor Place Opera House, leaving 22 dead, with 9 others dying of injuries within 5 days. A total of 150 were wounded. William Macready, the noted British tragedian against whom the demonstration was aimed, escaped unhurt. Between 10,000 and 24,000 rioters, many from Irish gangs, had surrounded the theater.

The magnificent interior of the theater was reduced almost to a wreck. The demonstration was said to have been instigated by Edwin Forrest, a first-rate American tragedian whom Macready had insulted.

Philly Fair Celebrates U.S. Centennial

The first World's Fair in the U.S. was held at Fifth Avenue and 42nd Street in New York in 1853 to less than expected attendance. Philadelphia was left to prove the U.S. could do better when they opened the second World's Fair on May 10, 1876. One notable attraction in Philadelphia was a sneak preview of the giant hand and torch of the Statue of Liberty before it was completed in New York Harbor.

Ethan & His Green Mountain Boys (not a Bluegrass group)

FT. TICONDEROGA, NY — It was Benedict Arnold, not Ethan Allen, who first conceived the attack on Fort Ticonderoga that took place on May 10, 1775. Told by Col. Sam Parsons that the line at Cambridge had needed cannon, Arnold remembered some artillery pieces he'd seen at the New York fort. He estimated the quantity at about 80 heavy cannon, 20 brass guns, and 12 mortars. In Boston, he submitted a plan to the Committee on Safety which, reluctant to move armed forces into an area outside their jurisdiction, hastily sent it on to their New York counterparts.

Dr. Joseph Warren, however, was unable to wait. He persuaded the Massachusetts group to reconsider, and they then granted Arnold a colonel's commission, authorizing 400 men for the raid. Arnold, who left promptly to recruit his force, soon learned that Parsons, mulling over their talk, had gone to citizens in Connecticut with a similar proposal. They, too, had issued a commission to Ethan Allen and the vigilante group (outlawed by New York for its subversive activities) he called his "Green Mountain Boys."

In a panic over the news, Arnold left his men far behind and galloped north in Allen's wake. At Castleton, NY, 20 miles from the fort, he found them enjoying a pre-fight, Saturday night drinking bout of rum and cider. Arnold challenged Allen's command. The huge outlaw guffawed, but he agreed that the arrogant Arnold could accompany him — provided Arnold gave no orders.

At 3 a.m., the two men stormed the fort, each one striving to be the first through the gate. Except for a startled sentry, who fled after his musket misfired, everyone else was sound asleep inside — 49 men (many of them old and sick), with 24 members of their families.

Aroused by shrieks of "No quarter! No quarter!" Lt. Feltham, the dilapidated fort's second-in-command, hurriedly awoke, grabbed his breeches, and met the boisterous attackers head-on as they stumbled up the stairs to his bedroom. The mountain men fell silent. With great presence of mind, Feltham coolly asked for their credentials. Colonel Arnold stepped forward, holding his paper from Massachusetts, and genteelly asked Feltham to give up. Allen was more forceful. Waving his drawn sword menacingly over the lieutenant's head, he demanded immediate surrender, without any shots being fired or he'd kill every man, woman, and child there.

Feltham could not comply. Surrendering was the right of Captain Delaplace, the fort commander who — unknown to both Arnold and Allen — was still struggling into his uniform.

Delaplace, years later, still did not know to whom he should have turned over his sword. The "Who's in command here?" controversy went on for weeks. Arnold finally quit the service in disgust, with the official decision yet to be made. Ethan Allen, in his autobiography written four years after, carefully avoided any suggestion that Benedict Arnold had even been at the fort.

His account, rife with error and false recollection, included his famous request to surrender "In the name of the Great Jehovah and the Continental Congress."

The Tories pointed out that Ethan Allen had no commission from either of these sources.

Allen's men, interviewed about this request later, could recall only that Allen's actual words were both profane and unprintable.

Lt. Feltham, in his official report to superiors, recounted it as a demand for "immediate possession of the fort and all the effects of George III."

The Continental Congress, embarrassed at not being told of the raid beforehand, gave serious thought to handing back the fort, since open revolt was in the planning stages as of that time.

Ironic postscript: The captured cannon had to be left where they were.

No transport capable of handling such heavy objects were available to haul them out.

Brooklyn Botanic Garden Debut

Brooklyn Botanic Garden officially opened on May 11, 1911. It has become one of the greatest in the world. An annual event in days gone by was the ordering of packets of seed by school children in all the boroughs. This photo was taken of a squad of young volunteers on the way out of the garden’s administration building with seed orders to be delivered to nearby schools.

BROOKLYN — The Brooklyn Botanic Garden was founded in 1910 on city waste land and became one of the great botanic gardens of the whole world and Brooklyn’s most popular cultural attraction.

On May 11, 1911 the Brooklyn Botanic Garden officially opened. Located at 1000 Washington Ave. along Eastern Parkway, it is a 52-acre oasis for many hundreds of thousands of visitors annually. It is committed to the refreshment, enjoyment and instruction of its visitors, serving to educate adults and children alike in the vast collection of plants from all over the world.

From the beginning, unlike most other botanic institutions of the time which focused on scientific research, the Garden popularized the art of gardening by teaching it to anyone who wanted to learn.

It became the first botanic garden in the world to have a Children’s Garden (1914) and to offer in-service training for school teachers. Programs begun in the early years achieved international reputation and have been widely copied.

The Garden boasts such features as lilac and daffodil hills, rose gardens, cherry blossom orchards, fragrance garden, and even a garden for the blind with signs in Braille.

The Japanese Garden is a favorite and a bonsai tree pavilion is located in the Steinhardt Conservatory along with the Aquatic House and environments of tropical, desert and temperate climates.

Quite frequently in this column we mention that a Brooklyn celebrity has been honored with a place on Brooklyn’s Celebrity Path in the Garden. The Path was created by Brooklyn Union (now KeySpan) and when it was begun in 1985 only a handful of names were installed. Today there are well over 100.

The Path was designed by a Brooklyn artist April Kinser. When you visit the Garden be sure to stroll the Path and reflect on how very much talent has originated in Brooklyn — with much more to come in future years.

In the Garden there is a continuous program of tours, concerts, classes and festivals. An annual event is the famous plant sale — the second-largest in the world. More information on events can be had by calling 718-622-4433.

Popular Broadway Headliner

BROOKLYN — Phil Silvers was born Philip Silver-smith in the Brownsville section of Brooklyn on May 11, 1912. He was the youngest of eight children. He had six brothers. His father was a sheet-metal worker who worked on New York skyscrapers before opening his own tinsmith shop in Bensonhurst. When Phil was 10, his clear alto voice made him a neighborhood celebrity and he began to perform for the fighters at Willie Beech’s gym. At eleven, he was a “breakdown singer” at a local movie house who entertained the audience when something went wrong with the projector.

At thirteen, Phil joined the famous vaudeville act, Gus Edward’s School Days Revue, and made his debut at the Palace Theatre in Manhattan. He toured with the Edward’s troupe for three years, until his voice changed. He then signed up with Morris and Campbell and for five years toured the two-a-day vaudeville circuit with them, playing the “fresh kid” in their farcical routines.

As the age of vaudeville drew to a close, Silvers resorted to making two-reel movies at $150 apiece, to playing night clubs, and putting on improvisations at large summer hotels in the Catskills (the so-called “borscht belt”) — against the competition of other talented newcomers like Moss Hart, Danny Kaye and Garson Kanin.

In 1934 Silvers signed up with the Minsky Burlesque troupe and for five years traveled the four-a-day circuit. “I’ve lived a week in practically every city in America except Utica, where I played three days,” Silvers recalled. He advanced from “third banana” (3rd class comedian) to “top banana,” earning a maximum of $125 a week. At this time he began wearing lens-less horn-rimmed glasses onstage, “to add something to my sort of blank face.”

A montage of Phil Silvers as he appeared through the years from his childhood in Brooklyn to the pinnacle of his success as a performer on stage, screen and television. Silvers was born in the Brownsville neighborhood of Brooklyn on May 11, 1912.

1939 to take the lead in a musical called Yokel Boy. Although the show was a failure, Silvers’ performance won him a $500-a-week contract with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. After he arrived in Hollywood, MGM allowed his contract to lapse. Silvers made his film debut in The Hit Parade in 1940, then appeared in 23 more pictures between 1942 and 1945.

He joined his friend Frank Sinatra in a USO unit in 1945, performing in the Mediterranean war area. Returning to the U. S., he had a profitable series of nightclub engagements.

Phil became one of Broadway’s most popular headliners starting with the lead role of a bungling small time con man, Harrison Fly, in High Button Shoes (1947). His performance as Jerry Biffle in Top Banana (1951) won him a Tony Award for best actor. He won the award again, 20 years later, for the revival of A Funny Thing Happened on the Way to the Forum. Phil and Nancy Walker, playing husband and wife, were hilarious in the 1960 Do Re Me.

Phil Silvers added fun to many movies including Lady Be Good (’41), Footlight Serenade (’42), Summer Stock (’50), It’s a Mad, Mad, Mad, Mad World (’63), a repeat of his stage role in A Funny Thing Happened on the Way to the Forum (’66) and A Guide for the Married Man (’67).

Following his first appearance on television as Sgt. Bilko on September 30, 1955, Silvers was hailed as a “resourceful, intelligent comedian,” and a “master of his art.” The long-running TV series was a tremendous success.

Phil wrote the lyrics for many popular songs including “Nancy With the Laughing Face” which he wrote for the daughter of his good friend Frank Sinatra. Phil Silvers died in 1985.

Of course Phil Silvers has been an honoree on the above-mentioned Brooklyn Celebrity Path at Brooklyn Botanic Garden since 1985.

Homey, Independent BookCourt Expands To Rural Site Where Literate Booklovers Gather

Bibliobarn, the prospective space for BookCourt’s northern outpost, is a 3,000 square-foot barn surrounded by five acres of farmland. Photos courtesy of BookCourt.

Brooklyn Daily Eagle

One-hundred-and-sixty miles north of Brooklyn in South Kortright, NY, Bibliobarn is a 3,000 square-foot barn, surrounded by five acres of farmland, that opened as a bookstore in 1996.

H.L. and Linda Wilson, the couple who opened the shop, live on the top floor of the barn and have developed a thriving literary community in the Catskills — but they now plan to move out and sell the space. The folks at BookCourt, the family-run bookstore that’s thrived in Cobble Hill for more than 30 years, hope to buy the barn and maintain its bookish tradition, adding their own flare and establishing what they’re calling BookCourt North: a bookstore, event space, and writers’ retreat.

H.L. and Linda Wilson opened Bibliobarn as a bookstore in 1996. Now that the couple is moving, Brooklyn’s BookCourt team plans to buy the space to launch BookCourt North.

Upon hearing that Bibliobarn was for sale, the BookCourt team launched an Indiegogo crowd-funding campaign to raise $300,000 for their project. Zack Zook, who coordinates events and development at BookCourt, and the shop’s manager, Andrew Unger, are spearheading the campaign.

BookCourt, located on Court St. in Cobble Hill, was established as an independent neighborhood bookstore in 1981.

They plan to open the barn’s ground floor as a bookshop in spring 2014. That summer, they hope to launch an event series both inside the barn and across the surrounding land, allowing for large festivals and events.

Zook told the Brooklyn Daily Eagle, “We want to bring a lot of what we’ve done here in Brooklyn to this new property, and also pay debt to the legacy of H.L. and Linda’s beloved destination. Our track record speaks for itself, so this is a great opportunity for the NYC literary community and the upstate creative community.”

BookCourt is especially excited about the prospect of renovating the upstairs of the barn into a residency space for what they call “a fully functioning and professionally managed writers’ retreat/residency.” The loft space is large enough to host at least six writers-in-residence at once, and Zook anticipates the program would begin in the fall of 2014.

While the BookCourt team plans to introduce new concepts, they also remain committed to maintaining Bibliobarn’s established literary community and customer base, and hope that current Bibliobarn customers will collaborate by sharing thoughts and ideas.

“It’ll be interesting getting involved in the community upstate and finding people who want to be involved and make the place something so much more than anyone thought possible,” said Zook.

Zack Zook, who manages events and development at BookCourt, is coordinating the campaign to launch BookCourt North along with Andrew Unger, BookCourt’s manager.

Campaign details and developments will be documented on their Indiegogo page. Any funds raised over $300K will be used to further develop the property.

Zook and Unger hope to hear from the public as they promote and define their plans; they emphasize their desire for BookCourt North to be a collaborative project.

“I think the most challenging aspect of the project foreseen will be actually raising the money,” Zook told the Eagle. “Everything else feels so incredibly natural and organic. We are counting on the people of the book world to see this through!”

Brooklyn’s Official Historian Named President of Society of Old Brooklynites

At their annual meeting at Brooklyn Borough Hall, Brooklyn Borough Historian Ronald Schweiger was elected as the 48th president of the Society of Old Brooklynites. The borough-wide civic organization dates back to 1880 when Brooklyn was an independent city and the third largest in the Nation.

Schweiger joins a long list of distinguished Brooklynites who have served at the helm of the Society. They have included former Brooklyn city mayors, members of Congress, the State Senate, military leaders, banking and business executives, attorneys, professors, newspaper publishers and editors, writers and two highly regarded women, one a DAR Regent (Margaret Skinner) and an ASCAP song writer and civic leader Theresa Rosen. The first Society President was former Brooklyn City Mayor John Ward Hunter.

Ronald Schweiger, a retired educator, is also the current president of the Brooklyn College Alumni Association. In 2002, he was appointed to the non-salaried position of Borough Historian by Brooklyn Borough President Marty Markowitz.

Among some of the more prominent members of the Society have been poet and editor Walt Whitman, Columbia University President Seth Low, a past Brooklyn and then City of New York Mayor; and the true father of baseball, Henry Chadwick.

The Society which lobbied the city, state and federal governments for a suitable monument in memory of the Prison Ship Martyrs from the American Revolution, has held an annual memorial tribute at the base of the 159-foot tall Prison Ship Martyrs Monument on the top of the hill in Fort Greene Park. Under the monument is a crypt where the remains of 11,500 patriots are entombed. This is the largest American Revolution burial site in the nation. The monument which was designed by Stanford White was dedicated in 1908 by President-elect William Howard Taft, representing President Theodore Roosevelt who was in in Panama at the time.

Other officers re-elected for another term were Michael Spinner, President and CEO of Sunset Park-based Spinner Industries as First Vice President; Ted General, a veteran columnist for two Brooklyn weekly newspapers and a local civic leader, as second Vice President; Sherman Silverman, a retired airline consultant, as Treasurer; Holly Fuchs, a member of Community Board 8 and a retired banking supervisor, as Corresponding Secretary and Linda Orlando, a retired court stenographer and area community activist, as Recording Secretary.

The Society of Old Brooklynites was incorporated by the City of Brooklyn on December 30, 1880. Although formerly called the Society of “Old” Brooklynites, it is somewhat of a misnomer because you don’t have to be considered “old” to join. Any citizen, age 25 or older who was born in Brooklyn, or resided here for at least 25 years, is eligible for membership.

HeartShare Dedicates Charity Run to Sandy Victims

By Paula Katinas
Brooklyn Daily Eagle

HeartShare Human Services of New York is dedicating its 33rd Annual Buckley’s – Kennedy’s 5K Charity Run to the people of Breezy Point who are still trying to rebuild their lives after Hurricane Sandy. The race is a yearly fundraiser that HeartShare, a non-profit social service agency based in downtown Brooklyn, sponsors to provide money for its programs. This year, the proceeds from the event will be split between HeartShare and the Breezy Point Co-op, an organization of shareholders who are assisting victims, HeartShare officials announced.

The race will take place on Sunday, May 19 starting at 10 a.m. The exact route of the race is still being mapped out, according to organizers. But the finish line will be at the Breezy Point Ball Field. Following the race, a family picnic will be held on the ball field. In past years, the race’s starting line was located outside Buckley’s, a Sheepshead Bay restaurant. The finish line was always located at Kennedy’s, a Breezy Point eatery. That will change this year, as the finish line is being moved to the ball field.

The theme of this year’s race is “Run... Rebuild... Revive.”

“It has been more than six months since Superstorm Sandy hit New York and totally destroyed 350 homes and damaged hundreds more in the Breezy Point community. Proceeds from this event will help the community rebuild their homes and neighborhood,” according to a statement issued by from HeartShare.

The race will be dedicated to the memory of race volunteers Beth Strehle, Elizabeth Buckley, Mary Williams, and John Kane.

The post-race picnic will feature performances by the band Head Over Heels, and DJ Suds, along with food and drinks, games and rides. You don’t have to take part in the race to enjoy the picnic, according to race organizers. The picnic is open to the general public at a cost of $10 per person. It’s free for runners and for children 12 and under.

To register for the race or Family Picnic, visit www.heartshare.org/run. Those who cannot attend either the run or the picnic, but wish to make a $10 donation can do so by texting 5KRUN to 27722.

Brooklyn Supreme Court Unveils Renovation, Court Remembers Judge Jones

By Rob Abruzzese
Brooklyn Daily Eagle

After an hour long ceremony, the Brooklyn Supreme Court, Civil Term, unveiled the renovated courthouse wing, during a Law Day event at the courthouse on Wednesday. A plaque commemorates the memory of the late Judge Theodore T. Jones

“This is a fitting tribute to Judge Jones,” said Janice E. Taylor, Jones’ former law clerk. Jones’ family was unable to attend the ceremony and Taylor accepted the plaque on their behalf. “Judge Jones was a wonderful jurist and loved Brooklyn.”

Appellate Division, Second Department Justice Sylvia Hinds-Radix cut the ribbon, as the new wing officially became part of the courthouse. The new wing features four courtrooms and back offices as well as New York’s largest consolidated facility dedicated exclusively to pre-trial litigation—what Administrative Judge for Civil Matters Lawrence Knipel, called the largest discovery complex in the nation.

“Discovery is a process that can take a very long time, sometimes even a matter of months, and we now have the largest discovery complex in the nation,” Knipel said. “This will help expedite litigation, which is important for the largest courthouse in the state.”

Jones was elected to the New York Supreme Court in 1989 where he served until he was appointed to the New York Court of Appeals by Governor Eliot Spitzer in 2007. He gained notoriety in 2005 for issuing an injunction to try to stop the transit strike that shut down the city’s subways and buses for 60 hours. He eventually fined the Transit Workers Union $2.5 million for violating the Taylor Law and sent the union president, Roger Toussaint, to jail for 10 days for contempt of court.

The event began with the New York State Ceremonial Union, led by Lt. James Campbell. Court Officer Thorance Scott sang the national anthem.

Knipel gave a welcoming speech, after which Hon. Jenny Rivera, Hon. Randall T. Eng, Borough President Marty Markowitz, Brooklyn District Attorney Charles J. Hynes, Brooklyn Bar Association president Domenick Napoletano, and NYC’s Corporation Counsel Michael A. Cardozo gave brief remarks.

The keynote speaker was Administrative Judge for Criminal Matters Barry Kamins. Kamins he ran through a brief history of how law has improved the civil rights of many different races, genders, and creeds in the country.

Kamins also used the opportunity to talk about human trafficking, or what he called “modern day slavery”.

“Fifteen thousand people are trafficked in America each year and New York is ranked fourth in the amount of human trafficking cases,” Kamins said. “As we have learned from our nation’s past, the expansion of human rights is a long road, and the journey is hard.”

It was a touching moment for

Hon. Michelle Weston as she presented Jones’ commemorative plaque. “I am truly honored to present this plaque,” Judge Weston said. “Judge Ted Jones was such a great presence at the courthouse and he made everyone before him feel at ease. No matter if he was ruling against you or not, you always walked away feeling like you got a fair shake.”

Columbian Lawyers Association Holds Final Meeting Under President Codispoti

Bruno Codispoti, president of the Columbian Lawyers Association of Brooklyn, and Lucinda DiSalvo.

By Rob Abruzzese
Brooklyn Daily Eagle

The Honorable Robert J. Miller, Associate Justice from the Appellate Division Second Department, spoke at the Columbian Lawyers Association of Brooklyn's latest monthly meeting on Tuesday. His message was a simple one – know the rules of the appellate court before trying a case in that court.

"It's something so simple, but a lot of people argue before our court without knowing the rules," Miller said. "Our court covers the broadest jurisdiction in the state so we are very busy and the key is to get to the point and be prepared."

In his speech "Appellate Practice in the Second Department," Miller explained that since the Second Department covers Brooklyn, Queens, Staten Island, Nassau, Suffolk, Dutchess, Bart Russo, First Vice President of the Columbian Lawyers Association of Brooklyn, Hon. Donald Kurtz, Hon. Kenneth Sherman, and Hon. Arthur M. Shack.

Hon. Pamela Fisher, and Sara Gozo, president of the Catholic Lawyers Guild.

Orange, Putnam, Rockland, and Westchester counties and 51 percent of New York's total population, not being prepared can be the difference between winning and losing a case.

Miller also highly recommended that attorneys always make oral arguments, noting that cases can occasionally be won on oral arguments alone.

"Making your [oral] argument can be the only way to sway [opinion]," Miller said in noting that attorneys often forgo the opportunity to argue their case in front of the court's panel relying solely on the strength of their written briefs. "Argue the appeal."

Miller also explained that on top of simply having a wide jurisdiction that the court is also burdened with a frozen budget for the last three years which has left them tremendously understaffed. "We currently have four vacant seats," he said.

This was the final meeting held by the Columbian Lawyers Association of Brooklyn under the leadership of current president Bruno Codispoti. It was not an those tragedies, but those tragedies that we endured only solidified the mutual respect that we have for each other," Codispoti said. "It's a great thing when you have this kind of support and shoulders to lean on. We are blessed to be attorneys who share a common heritage and support each other."

Other members had great things to say about Codispoti's time as president. "Bruno was a very professional, very hands-on president and very much a part of keeping us who we are," said past president Steven Bamundo.

One of the final acts under Codispoti's presidency was the nomination and election of new officers.

Robert J. Musso was named the incoming president, Bartholomew T. Russo was named the first vice-president, Rose Ann C. Branda the second VP, and Dean G. Delianites the third. Mark A. Longo will be the new treasurer, Linda LoCascio the corresponding secretary, Hon. Frank R. Seddio the recording secretary, and George J. Siracuse the historian.

Jane Carbonaro Arrbitto, Stefano A. Filippazzo, and Joseph S. Rosato were also elected to the Board of Directors Class of 2016.

During the meeting, a moment of silence was held for Frank Carone, who was not able to attend because of the loss of his grandmother. "Let's keep Frank and his family in our prayers," added Bart Russo.

One of the last things that Codispoti did under his presidency was single out and thank Lucinda DiSalvo for all the hard work she does in helping to organize the many meetings and events.

Hon. Frank Seddio and Steven Bamundo, past president of the Columbian Lawyers Association of Brooklyn.

John Buhta was presented with the Freda Nisnewitz Award for his work in pro bono service. “This award is going to someone who provides effective, revolutionary and exemplary service towards the access to justice,” noted Jeannie Costello, executive director of the Volunteer Lawyers Project. “John exemplifies the noble goals of the legal profession with his finely calibrated ability to get things done with gusto.”

New trustees were formally announced, and the retiring trustees were recognized for their service to the Bar Association. The new candidates for office — Andrew Fallek (president), Rebecca Woodland (president-elect), Arthur Aidala (first vice president), Hon. Frank Seddio (second vice president), Aimee Richter (secretary) and David Chidekel (treasurer) — will be inducted at a ceremony on June 21.

Members of the Brooklyn Bar Association gathered in the large auditorium Wednesday evening to present fellow colleagues with service awards and formally announce the election of new officers and trustees.

The evening began with warm welcoming remarks from outgoing President Domenick Napoletano. Marc Aronson accepted the first Distinguished Service Award of the evening. "This would normally be the best thing that happened to me this week, but this week I became a grandfather," he said gleefully.

Robert Gershon, the Brooklyn attorney who spearheaded the lawsuit to preserve the 18b panel (the assigned counsel plan that allows indigent persons to receive legal counsel) was also awarded for his distinguished service. "This Bar has been extremely important to me," Gershon said.

The final Distinguished Service Award was presented to elder law attorney Fern Finkel. "This lady does things in the service sector that you cannot imagine," Napoletano said. Finkel dedicated her award to "all those who bring honor to the profession." Included in Finkel's list was her father, who practiced for more than 50 years, and her husband.

There was a lot of talk regarding the First Annual Honorable Theodore T. Jones, Jr., golf outing in April. Frank Carone was presented with a trophy for his work as chair of the inaugural golf tournament committee. The late Hon. Jones was further commemorated when an oil portrait of him was unveiled.

Retired court clerk John DeVito received the Hon. Nathan R. Sobel Award. "This award takes on a special meaning," DeVito said. Story continues on page 19

The Legal Issues Behind the Corruption Probe

By Charisma L. Miller, Esq.
Brooklyn Daily Eagle

Politics are often wrought with corruption and scandal. Over the past year, scandal has marred many Brooklyn politicians who have been charged with various forms of political corruption schemes.

Assemblyman Vito Lopez has been accused of sexually harassing female staffers. While Lopez, who represents northern Brooklyn, denies the accusations, the state Assembly approved a $103,000 settlement to settle some of the harassment claims.

Another Assemblyman, William Boyland, was hit with federal mail-fraud charges for allegedly submitting fraudulent travel vouchers. And just this month, state Senator John Sampson was charged with embezzlement, obstruction of justice and making false statements to the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

As Brooklyn residents grapple with the list of suspected corrupt officials who have sworn to represent Brooklyn's interests, Brooklyn may have to brace itself for an expanded list of names. Nine New York City elected officials, two of whom are from Brooklyn, were secretly recorded as part of a larger corruption investigation conducted by the federal government.

State Senators Eric Adams, Ruth Hassel-Thompson, Jose Peralta and Velmanette Montgomery; City Council Member Ruben Wills; former political consultant Melvin

Lowe; and Curtis Taylor, a former press advisor, were secretly recorded by former State Senator Shirley Huntley. Huntley pleaded guilty to embezzlement and faces up to two years in prison.

Adams, a Brooklyn Democrat, is considered the top contender for

Assemblyman Vito Lopez
D-Bushwick/Williamsburg

Brooklyn borough president. A former captain in the New York Police Department, Adams is an outspoken critic of the department's stop, question and frisk policy, and testified recently in a federal trial challenging the tactic.

Adams said he had not been contacted about any investigation. "I believe deeply in transparency and the pursuit of justice — and that is why I committed 20 years of my life to law enforcement," he said. "I am more than willing to help with any investigation."

It is unclear who is the target and who is merely a subject of this corruption investigation. "There is a difference," Brooklyn attorney Howard Schwartz told the Brooklyn

State Sen. John Sampson
D-Southeast Brooklyn

Daily Eagle. "The subject of an investigation is someone who may or may not be involved in criminal activity. The target, on the other hand, is the person or persons that the investigators are after."

When an individual is the target of an investigation, "law enforcement officials have already made the determination said person has committed a crime and are seeking evidence to support an indictment,"

Schwartz explained.

Defending a corruption case has its challenges, noted Schwartz. "The main challenge is in the discovery phase; finding out what the government has against your client." Once discovery is complete, Schwartz advises that the credibility of the wiretap be questioned. "Check the quality of the tapes. Sometimes the wiretap technology is old, and the audio recorded is unintelligible," he said.

Schwartz also advised that the content recorded be scrutinized: "A wiretap can be challenged if what is recorded on the tape is not an accurate portrayal. A prudent lawyer would make note of any audio that is taken out of context."

In addition to the tapes' audio, the credibility of the person wearing the wire should be challenged, Schwartz advised. "A lot of these corruption cases hinge on the credibility of witnesses. If there is no paper trail [i.e., financial records, email exchanges], then the success of the government's case lays primarily on witness testimony."

Of the above-named politicians secretly recorded by Huntley, only three yielded evidence "useful to law enforcement authorities," the government revealed in court filings.

Montgomery, a civil rights activist from Brooklyn, did not immediately return messages from the Brooklyn Daily Eagle seeking comment.

Feds in Brooklyn: Hackers Stole $45M From ATMs

By Colleen Long
Associated Press

A gang of cyber-criminals stole $45 million in a matter of hours by hacking their way into a database of prepaid debit cards and then draining cash machines around the globe, federal prosecutors said Thursday.

Brooklyn U.S. Attorney Loretta Lynch called it "a massive 21st-century bank heist" and compared it to the Lufthansa heist in the late 1970s immortalized in the film

"Goodfellas." Lynch said the fraudsters had moved with astounding speed to loot financial institutions around the world.

Seven people are under arrest in the U.S. in connection with the case, which prosecutors said involved thousands of thefts from ATMs using bogus magnetic swipe cards. The accused ringleader in the U.S. cell, Alberto Yusi Lajud-Pena, was reportedly murdered in the Dominican Republic late last month, prosecutors said.

An indictment unsealed Thursday accused the eight of being members of the New York cell, saying they withdrew $2.8 million in cash from hacked accounts in less than a day. One of the suspects was caught on multiple surveillance cameras, his backpack increasingly loaded down with cash. Others took photos of themselves with giant wads of bills as they made their way up and down Manhattan.

atives fanning out to rapidly withdraw money in multiple cities, authorities said.

Lynch called it a "virtual criminal flash mob." She said they could use any plastic card to withdraw the cash — an old hotel key card or an expired credit card — as long as they had the account data and correct access codes.

There were two separate attacks, one in December and one in February. In the second attack, more than 36,000 transactions were made worldwide and about $40 million was stolen.

Lynch would not say who masterminded the attacks globally, who the hackers are or where they were located, citing an ongoing investigation.

The seven men arrested in New York were U.S. citizens originally from the Dominican Republic, lived in Yonkers and were mostly in their 20s. Lynch said they all knew each other and were recruited together, as were other cells in other countries. They were charged with conspiracy and money laundering.
