Good morning. Today is the 235th day of the year. The Brooklyn Daily Eagle of Aug. 23, 1902, contained an ad for "Malt Creamlet Cocoa." This product, similar to hot chocolate, consisted of squares that were meant to be put into hot water or hot milk, where they would dissolve. Later that year, after a complaint from a New York City resident, the state Department of Health concluded that the product contained verv little cocoa, but lots of sugar and fat. Nevertheless. the state determined that it was harmless and could still be sold.

Well-known people who were born today include basketball player Kobe Bryant, Hall of Fame football player Sonny Jurgensen, actress Barbara Eden ("I Dream of Jeannie"), actor Scott Caan ("Hawaii Five-0") and comedian Mark Russell.

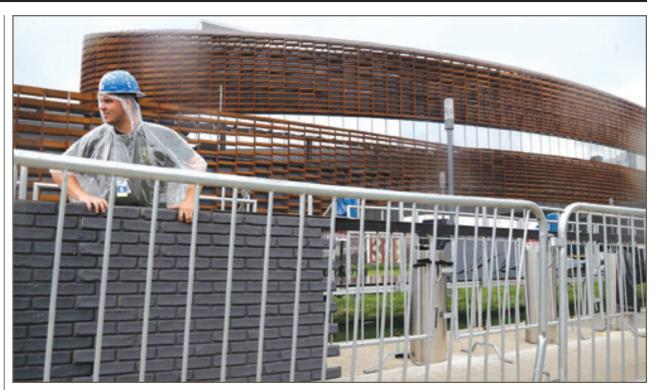

* * * On Saturday from noon to 4 p.m. at Union Street between Rogers and Nostrand avenues, the Brooklyn Metropolis Lions Club and Assemblyman Karim Camara will present the Fourth Annual Union-Nostrand Street Festival and Back to School Giveback. There will be free backpacks with school supplies as well as free food, games and live entertainment. ... On Saturday at 10 a.m., the Society of Old Brooklynites will hold their 105th annual memorial tribute to the Prison Ship Martyrs and commemoration of the Revolutionary War Battle of Brooklyn. The ceremony will be held at Prison Ship Martyrs' Monument in Fort Greene Park, whose base contains the remains of 11,500 American patriots who died aboard rotting British prison ships in New York Harbor during the Revolution. Brooklyn Borough Historian Ron Schweiger will deliver the keynote address

Ratner To Sell Off Part of Unfinished Atlantic Yards?

According to The New York Times, Bruce Ratner, executive chairman of Forest City Ratner, is seeking an investor to buy as much as 80 percent of the rest of the $5 billion Atlantic Yards development, which is slated to eventually include 14 residential buildings.

The Barclays Center, the centerpiece of the development, was finished last year.

The Times says Ratner's company could reap as much as $800 million from the sale of 50 to 80 percent of the remaining project. However, the company would remain in control and continue to develop the property.

Levin Wants City To Release Data on Film Shoots

By Paula Katinas Brooklyn Eagle

New York is starting to rival Hollywood as a place where movies and television shows are filmed. Hundreds of films and television shows are shot on city streets each year, according to the Mayor's Office of Film, Theater and Television. On its website, the office states that the entertainment industry contributes $7.1 billion to the city's economy annually and employs 130,000 people.

But the city could be doing a better job of informing the public about the benefits and drawbacks of turning city streets into soundstages, Councilman Steve Levin said.

Levin (D-Brooklyn Heights-Williamsburg-Greenpoint) planned to introduce a bill on Thursday that would require the Office of Film, Theater and Broadcasting to release reports on a monthly and an annual basis giving details about filming in New York City.

The legislation would require monthly reports detailing the locations of all film shoot permits in New York City, broken down by borough, community board, council district and street. The bill would also require a fully detailed annual report of the data compiled in the monthly reports, detailed employment figures related to the filming industry, and costs and benefits of filming in New York City. Under Levin's bill, all these reports would be made available online.

"Especially in the neighborhoods in my district, like Brooklyn Heights and Greenpoint, filming is taking place on a regular basis. While our communities are very supportive of the many benefits that filming brings to our city, these shoots can sometimes cause headaches for residents of the community where filming takes place regularly," Levin said.

"By providing as much information as possible to the public about film shoots in New York City, we can create a more transparent city government and make filming a positive experience for even more New Yorkers," Levin said.

The city currently does not make information about film shoots available online and does not provide detailed information about the costs and benefits of the filming industry, Levin said.

Judy Stanton, executive director of the Brooklyn Heights Association, supports the bill. "Brooklyn Heights is a prime location for film shoots, and we have sought access to more information about filming activity in New York City. We therefore view this bill as a direct response to concerns voiced by our members regarding the impact of filming on the quality of life in City Councilman Steve Levin wants the city to provide more information to the public about film shoots.

Brooklyn Heights," she said.

Todd Eaton, co-chairman of the Open Space Alliance Community Committee, said Levin's proposed legislation would benefit residents by giving them more information on how their streets are being used. "As a resident of a neighborhood that hosts many film productions, it would be great to have insight into how our streets are being used," said Eaton, who lives in Greenpoint. "This bill is a great step in helping citizens to understand how our neighborhoods and streets are being used by the film industry and what the resulting benefits are to our communities.

Heights Congregation Recevies | Plastic Bags May Cost 'Sacred Sites' Grant

The New York Landmarks Conservancy has given a $10,000 Sacred Sites grant for facade restoration to Congregation B'nai Avraham in Brooklyn Heights, part of a total of $275,000 awarded to historic religious properties throughout the state.

"It's vital to renew and repair religious buildings," said Peg Breen, president of The New York Landmarks Conservancy. "Not only do these sites convey their communities' history, they serve their neighborhoods today with food pantries, nursery schools, concerts and a variety of worthy programs."

Congregation B'nai Avraham, at 117 Remsen St., is located in an Italianate townhouse, part of a block of handsome rowhouse residences and institutional buildings that were constructed in the 1850s.

The building has a long history as a synagogue, serving as the Brooklyn Heights Synagogue from 1960 to 1996, when Congregation Avraham purchased the building. It was previously the headquarters of the Brooklyn Engineers' Club. The synagogue building features both Italianate and Gothic Revival decorative elements, such as a bracketed wooden cornice, handsome rope-motif wood molding at window surrounds, arched windows and an Italianate entrance. The townhouse was built by shipping magnate Henry Nesmith, whose family lived there from 1856 through the 1880s.

You Under New Bill

By Paula Katinas

That plastic bag your grocer puts your eggs and bread in at the checkout counter will cost you 10 cents if a new bill introduced on Tuesday wins the City Council's approval.

Councilman Brad Lander (D-Park Slope-Cobble Hill) and Councilwoman Margaret Chin (D-Lower Manhattan) have introduced a bill that would require grocery stores to charge customers 10 cents for each plastic bag. There would also be a charge for paper bags, under the proposed legislation.

It's in the interest of protecting the environment, according to Lander and Chin, who said New Yorkers use 5.2 billion carryout bags per year, the vast majority of which are not recycled. Plastic bags account for over 1,700 tons of residential garbage each week in New York City. The bill's sponsors said plastic bags get stuck in storm drains, exacerbating flooding and sewage into waterways, lischarges and are the fourth most commonly found type of litter on U.S. beaches. New York City pays an estimated $10 million to transport 100,000 tons of plastic bags to landfills in other states each year. The proposed plastic bag charge would not be a tax, Lander said. The 10 cents for each bag would be retained by the store to cover the cost of providing bags. Customers who bring their own bags would not be charged.

"It can be easy to forget the impact we each have on the environment - an impact that really adds up when you have a city of 8 million people," Lander said. "The truth is there are a lot of times that we don't really need a plastic bag. This common sense legislation will help New York cut plastic bag waste, both saving money and reducing litter, without affecting small businesses," he said.

Similar laws in other cities reduced plastic bag use by as much as 90 percent, council members said.

Chin said the bill will help make New Yorkers more environmentally conscious. "Too often at the register, we bag and double-bag, heedless of the severe environmental cost we all pay. In my district in Lower Manhattan, after a busy weekend, you can see these bags overflowing from trash cans and in the streets and gutters. The bags end up clogging our streets, littering our public parks, and costing taxpayers millions of dollars

"This bill incentivizes consumers to bring their own reusable bags and think twice before reaching for paper or plastic ones, which will cut back on pollution and ultimately protect New York City's invaluable green spaces and waterways that have been under threat for too long," Chin said.

Environmental groups applauded the bill. "This is a strong and thoughtful piece of legislation that builds on what we've seen across the country and that will work in New York City," said Jennie R. Romer, founder of the website PlasticBagLaws.org. "Legislation like this has been shown to lead to swift and significant changes in consumer behavior because consumers must make a decision as to whether they need a carryout bag for each particular purchase, taking into account any future use of the bag including use as garbage-can liners or cat litter," she said.

New York state does have a voluntary plastic bag recycling program, but it has proven ineffective because it lacks enforcement, Lander and Chin said.

The bill contains exceptions. For example, produce, meat and bulk food bags used within stores are exempt from the charge in order to protect food from contamination.

B'nai Avraham is Brooklyn Heights' only Orthodox synagogue. It hosts a large, year-round preschool, the Brooklyn Heights Senior Group and a community mikvah, or ritual bath. The onsite nursery school also runs a nearby day care center.

The building is within the Brooklyn Heights Historic District, New York City's first historic district, which was designated in the mid-1960s. Since its founding, the

New York Landmarks Conservancy has given more than $40 million in grants and loans. The amount leveraged more than $1 billion in 1,550 restoration projects throughout New York, revitalizing communities, providing economic stimulus and supporting local jobs. The conservancy has also offered countless hours of pro bono technical advice to building owners. Its work has saved more than a thousand buildings across the city and state.

in cleanup and waste removal," she said.

EVIEW AND COMMENT Internet Privacy Should Trump Growth

Facebook and its friends say they will mount the latest effort to connect the rest of the world to the Internet.

Right now about two-thirds of the global population – some 5 billion people - doesn't have access to the Web. The social media giant - which has 1.15 billion customers already - knows there are billions more out there who would sign up if only they could get online.

That's a good goal, but it shouldn't be their top priority.

The percentage of people with Internet access worldwide is already growing by about 9 percent each year. But that pace is too slow for Facebook and its partners in the new Internet.org endeavor, which includes mostly companies that produce mobile phone handsets.

Internet.org will try to speed up adoption by offering less-expensive devices to access the Internet and developing more-efficient applications that require less data to operate. (Notably missing from Internet.org are other iconic Internet companies such as Google, Microsoft, Twitter, and Apple.)

Facebook chief executive officer Mark Zuckerberg is even floating the idea that Internet connectivity should be considered a human right, on the same list as freedom of speech or a fair trial.

There's no doubt that better communication boosts commerce. Farmers and small-business people in remote African villages already are using basic mobile phones (voice and simple texts only), even without Internet connections, to greatly enhance their enterprises. Full Internet connectivity via smart phones would serve them even better.

But let's not go overboard. Internet connectivity would be a great improvement, but it ranks behind adequate food, clean water, and decent shelter - or safety from war and other forms of violence. If Facebook really wants to help the world, it could contribute directly to solving those problems.

Former Microsoft founder-turned-philanthropist Bill Gates seemed to make that point in responding to a different effort to spread the Internet. Called Project Loon, the Google-backed scheme involves floating balloons that broadcast Internet signals high over remote regions. If you're a poor person with an illness who needs aid, Mr. Gates says, you might look up and see one of the balloons, but "I'm not sure how it'll help you."

This week may not have been the most opportune time to promote the benefits of Internet connectivity. The Internet issue on Americans' minds is their privacy.

Facebook and other Internet giants should first be looking at improving the privacy and security they provide to their current customers. This week Mr. Zuckerberg suffered the embarrassment of having a Palestinian programmer hack into his own Facebook page. The programmer did not have a malicious intent; he only wanted to prove that anyone's Facebook account is vulnerable to hackers.

And there's more bad news for Facebook: A recent study adds to a body of existing research suggesting that the more people use Facebook, the less satisfied they are about their lives, including becoming depressed. The reverse was true when the subjects of the study made "real world" social contacts, which made them feel better about themselves.

The Wall Street Journal fanned the flames of the National Security Agency controversy this week when it reported that the NSA has the capacity to spy on 75 percent of domestic U.S. Internet traffic, all in the name of rooting out foreign terrorist activity.

Facebook and friends might want to place more effort on protecting the privacy of their current customers before they rush too quickly around the world looking for more of them.

The Lindy Hop's Back

MANHATTAN — Life magazine's August 23, 1943 issue spotlighted a dance craze that was sweeping the nation - the Lindy Hop. The Lindy was named after American aviation hero Charles A. Lindbergh, and began its entry into the American lifestyle in 1927.

The Savoy Ballroom in Harlem was really jumping when George "Shorty" Snowden, one of the Savoy's famous dancers, started doing twists, turns, jumps and twirls to the music of greats like Duke Ellington, Cab Calloway, Count Basie and Ella Fitzgerald. Snowden told everyone he was doing the Lindy Hop. The jitterbug, swing, or Lindy as it was called by white dancers became an integral part of Hollywood's golden era and was picked up by the youth of America during WW II, as Life exhibited on their cover in 1943.

DOLLEY FLEES AS BRITISH INVADE

On August 23, 1814, as the British prepared to invade Washington, DC, during the Revolution, First Lady Dolley Madison wrote here sister indicating the President had departed Washington the day before and instructed her to be ready to leave the White House as a moment's notice. As far as Dolley was concerned it was "business as usual" and for two days she had made preparations for a sumptuous dinner for 40. It was to have celebrated a victory by the president and his military officers over the British.

But later in the day the British won the battle at Bladensburg, just outside Washington, and Dolley felt it was time to "get while the getting was good." But she was not going without Stuart's large portrait of Washington. She wrenched it from its frame, gathered the White House silver plate, some official papers. her pet parrot and told the White House and the capital city good bye.

The next day when the invading British entered the White House they found in the dining parlor a table spread for forty guests. Several kinds of wine were cooling on the sideboard; knives, forks and spoons were arranged for immediate use; in short, everything was ready for the entertainment of a ceremonious party. In the kitchen they found spits, turned before the fire; pots, saucepans, and other culinary utensils stood upon the grate, and all the other requisites for an elegant and substantial repast were exactly in a state which indicated that they had been lately and precipitately abandoned.

The hungry British soldiers wasted no time in partaking of the food and drink and then promptly burned the house down.

Overturned Conviction 50 Years Too Late

Unjust convictions have been made by some judges and juries since the beginning of crime. On August 23, 1927, two Italian immigrants Nicola Sacco (right) and Bartolomeo Vanzetti were electrocuted, having been convicted in a 1921 trial "permeated by prejudice."

CHARLESTOWN, MA -Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti, Italian immigrants who had arrived in America in 1908, were electrocuted at the Charlestown, MA, prison on throughout the world, claiming that the two men had been condemned because they were guilty only of being immigrants and outspoken anarchists. Both men had in fact been under investigation by the U.S. Dept. of Justice for their radical activities long before their arrest.Six years of appeals marked this American cause celebre, during which substantial evidence was presented to show that both men were elsewhere at the time of the crime. Even a confession from another person failed to save them from public anger. Plays, operas and many books have been written about the case, usually depicting Sacco and Vanzetti as martyrs and their case as a classic miscarriage of justice.

Silent Screen Idol Mourned

MANHATTAN Rudolph Valentino, whose real name was Rodolpho D'Antonguolla, arrived in New York as an immigrant from Italy in 1913

Before his movie acting career began in 1918, he worked as a gardener, dishwasher, and dancer. He became a worldwide romantic idol of millions of women movie fans. He had just completed The Son of the Sheik in 1926 and was in New York preparing for a publicity trip to Europe when, on August 16 he collapsed in his suite at the Ambassador Hotel.

He was rushed to Polytechnic Hospital and underwent surgery to repair a perforated ulcer and to remove a ruptured appendix. The hospital was jammed with fans and reporters. Thousands of telegrams arrived at the hospital as well as hundreds of Bibles, flowers and rosaries. After the surgery, Valentino asked for a mirror. "I just want to see what I look like when I'm sick," he said, "so that if I ever have to play the part in pictures, I'll know how to put on the right makeup.'

Valentino seemed to be recovering when suddenly on August 22 he had a relapse and the infection spread. That night Major Bowes asked his national radio network "Amateur Hour" audience to pray for the screen star. Valentino fell into a coma the next morning and at noon on August 23 he died at the age of Valentino admirer Pola Negri ordered four thousand roses for his bier. More than 20,000 people jammed the streets around the funeral chapel at 67th & Broadway waiting to view the body. The frenzied crowd finally crashed through the front window, clawing at each other to get a glimpse of the dead Sheik. More than 100 were injured in the near-

Busy Acting Since Age Eight

Steve Guttenberg was born in Brooklyn on August 24, 1958. He started out as a child actor at age 8. He attended Plainedge High School at Massapequa, LI, after which he named his production company Massapequa. He studied at forming Arts, Juilliard and The Actors Studio. He was already a professional as a teenager, making his off-Broadway debut in a revival of The Lion in Winter. In 1976 he was first seen before the cameras in the made-for-TV Something for Joey. The following year he made his bigscreen bow in The Chicken Chronicles.

His many films have included Can't Stop the Music ('80), Diner ('82), the first four Police Academy movies ('84 to 87), both Cocoon films ('85 & '88), Short Circuit ('86), Three Men and a Baby ('87), Three Men and a Little Lady ('90), Airbourne ('98), Home Team ('98), Love and Fear ('99) and a remake of the film The Poseidon Adventure ('05).

On television Steve played the title role in a half-hour sitcom "Billy" (1979), about a 19-year-old who fantasized a lot. It was an offbeat sitcom, somewhat resembling "Monty Python's Flying Circus." Steve was also the lead character Roger, manager of the Hotel Pelican, in "No Soap, Radio" (1982).

Guttenberg's belated Broadway debut was in Prelude to a Kiss. Guttenberg produced the film P.S. Your Cat is Dead from the play. He wrote the screenplay and directed as well as acted in the production.

Guttenberg has long been involved in charity work. The Guttenberg House is an apartment complex he funded to accommodate young people after their graduation from foster child status, with an on-site social worker.

The Entertainment Industry Foundation, Hollywood's charity arm, selected him to be Ambassador for Children's Issues. In this capacity, he spearheaded Sights for Students, which helps provide glasses for underprivi-

Running From the Mob

MANHATTAN — On August 24, 1939 Louis "Lepke" Buchalter, "president" of "Murder Incorporated," arranged to give himself up at Madison Square Garden by an arrangement with newspaper columnist Walter Winchell.

Buchalter grew up on the Lower East Side and got involved in extortion, protection rackets, loan sharking, and other illegal operations. His tactics were anything but genteel, but were profitable enough to fill his life with the luxuries he loved so much. At the time Thomas E. Dewey was the district attorney of Manhattan and Buchalter became one of his chief targets. But Buchalter was not only a target of "law," but gangland was hot on his trail as well. In 1937 he went into hiding, spending most of his time on Third Street in Brooklyn. To save his skin, Buchalter felt the

To save his skin, Buchalter felt the safest place for him was to be behind bars. He made the deal with Winchell to surrender and the gossip columnist took him to Fifth Avenue and 28th Street where J. Edgar Hoover of the Federal Bureau of Investigation was waiting. Expecting to be safe behind bars, Buchalter was tried and convicted of master-minding the murder of a Brooklyn store owner. He was executed at the state prison in Sing Sing in March 1944.

Roseanne's Trailer Park Culture

Roseanne Barr, joking around.

MANHATTAN — If you were tuned in on "The Tonight Show Star-ring Johnny Carson" in 1985 you'd have heard Johnny say with that benign twinkle he reserved for fledgling comics: "This is her very first appearance on national television. Would you welcome Roseanne Barr.' 'So I'm fat," Barr says drily as she takes the stage. "I thought I'd point that out." This was really different: a female comedian not only talking sardonically about being fat but tossing off sassy, smart jokes about trailerpark culture. By the end of her set, when she got to husbands as a subject, Barr "slayed" the audience. The final joke: "This bugs me the worst: when the husband thinks that the wife knows where everything is. Like they think the uterus is a tracing device. 'Cause he comes in there, 'Hey, Roseanne, do we have any Chee-tos left?' Like he can't go over and lift up that sofa cushion himself."

The Battle of Brooklyn: A Barkeep's View

Howard House, depicted above in the late 1700s and below in the 1870s, was an ongoing establishment in East New York from around 1700 until the 1920s. On August 27, 1776, tavern owner William Howard was forced by the invading British army to lead them through Jamaica Pass, which allowed them to surprise Washington's army and win the Battle of Brooklyn.

This week marks the anniversary of that fateful fight, also known as the Battle of Long Island, and I thought I'd take a look at some of the Revolutionary era taverns and inns of Brooklyn — since some of them saw a bit of the action during that conflict.

during that conflict. If you're fuzzy on the battle's details, roughly speaking, it went down like this: After ominously amassing in New York Harbor in the weeks following the signing of the Declaration of Independence, British forces came ashore in Brooklyn near present day Fort Hamilton under the command of General William Howe and streamed along Brooklyn's rugged roadways, or "pass-' toward the Continental es. Army's network of forts surrounding Brooklyn Heights, engaging in a number of skirmishes along the way. The most northern of these routes and the least direct — Jamaica Pass — was sorely undermanned, the British learned, and so Howe sent through thousands of British soldiers augmented by Hessian mercenaries in what military historians like to call a "brilliant flanking maneuver." The battle climaxed at the Vechte-Cortelyou house, today a museum and cultural center known as the Old Stone House at present day Fifth Avenue and Third Street in Park Slope.

There, the rebels' General William Alexander (aka Lord Stirling) led his heavily outnumbered Maryland soldiers against the British, delaying them from reaching the Heights, so that Washington and the rest of the troops could escape to Manhattan and live to fight anAugust 27, 1776. General Howe became confused along the craggy road and entered the tavern, demanding that proprietor William Howard lead them through the pass. The episode was later recalled by his son, Joseph Howard, then 14 years old:

"It was about 2 o'clock in the morning of the 27th of August that I was awakened by seeing a soldier at the side of my bed. I got up and dressed and went down to the barroom, where I saw my father standing in one corner with three British soldiers before him with muskets and bayonets fixed. The army was then lying in the field in front of the house ... General Howe and another officer were in the barroom. General Howe wore a camlet cloak over his regimentals. After asking for a glass of liquor from the bar, which was given him, he entered into familiar conversation with my father, and among other things said, 'I must have some one of you to show me over the Rockaway

Path around the pass.' "My father replied, 'We belong to the other side, General, and can't serve you against our duty.' General Howe replied, 'That is alright; stick to your country, or stick to your principles, but Howard, you are my prisoner and must guide my men over the hill.' My father made some further objection, but was silenced by the general, who said, 'You have no alternative. If you refuse I shall shoot you through the head.'"

At the point of a sword, Howard complied. He and his son, who was also pressed into service, conducted the British soldiers through Jamaica Pass where they would ultimately descend along with the other columns of British soldiers in a battle that came to a head at the old Stone House.

ed in the first shots of the battle. "The largest Battle of the Revolution was set in motion by an unexpected encounter in a watermelon patch," historian Barnet Schecter has pointed out.

The British were fired upon by Edward Hand's riflemen stationed at the Inn, and the redcoats briefly retreated before returning with a bigger force, and the skirmish expanded. Ultimately, this confrontation only helped to distract the Americans from the British forces secretly marching through Jamaica Pass.

t the end of the battle Washington and much of the Continental Army fled Brooklyn at Fulton Ferry Landing to Manhattan, where they pret-

Wine and Food Festival Scheduled for Bed-Stuy

From Toast of Brooklyn Festival

The 2013 Toast of Brooklyn Wine and Food Festival will be held on Friday, Sept. 13 and Saturday, Sept. 14.

The festival will be presented by the Bedford-Stuyvesant Gateway Business Improvement District (The BID) and the Bedford-Stuyvesant Restoration Corporation (BSRC). It will be held outdoors at Bed-Stuy Restoration's West Plaza Courtyard.

The purpose of the festival is to combine wine and spirits, food from specialty restaurants and performances. It was originally created as a "Toast to Bed-Stuy" in 2009, when the Fulton-Nostrand Merchants Association was designated as the city's 64th business improvement district.

This year's event embraces all of Brooklyn and is expected to host more than 3,500 participants. In partnership with iSee Promotions LLC, more than 50 wines and culinary chefs and experts will participate. Celebrities and guests will be offered samples of enjoyable fine wines and spirits, and culinary tastings, in this entertainment and cultural hub.

The festival will kick off on Friday at 6 p.m. with a VIP Reception honoring Nelson Mandela for his humanitarianism and social activism. House of Mandela Wines, represented by his daughter Dr. Makaziwe Mandela and granddaughter Tukwini Mandela, will receive the award on his behalf.

A number of local leaders will also be recognized for their commitment to the community, and artwork by Brooklyn artist Danny Simmons will be on display.

LEGAL NOTICES

The second day's festivities will take place between 2 and 9 p.m. In addition to wine and food tastings, there will be cooking demonstrations by the borough's best chefs and live music featuring jazz, soul and other genres. Arts and crafts will also be available.

"We bring sophisticated events to our community to show what we have to offer in our neighborhood back yard. When we have organized this event in the past, it was very successful and this year we are engaging more companies and expecting a larger crowd," says Edmon Braithwaite, founder of Toast of Brooklyn and owner of Nostrand Wines and Liquors.

"This festival is the primary fund-raising event for The BID, in addition to honoring those that have contributed globally and locally to the Bed-Stuy BID's cultural and economic development. We hope to give visitors the opportunity to experience the many offerings of the Bed-Stuy Gateway BID," adds Michael Lambert, executive director of The BID.

SPORTS Yanks Spoiling Cyclones' Playoff Push Baby Bombers Rally Past Brooklyn on Thomas' Three-Run Blast

By John Torenli Sports Editor Brooklyn Eagle

Two steps forward, one step back might not be good enough for the Cyclones if they hope to capture a third straight postseason berth this summer.

With the regular-season slate down to a mere 14 games, Brooklyn can ill-afford to give away late leads or lose to teams that no longer have a realistic chance of qualifying for the playoffs.

The Baby Bums did both Wednesday night at Richmond County Bank Ballpark, squandering a two-run lead in an eventual 5-3 loss to the last-place Staten Island Yankees before a crowd of 4,701.

The Cyclones (31-30), who had won seven of their previous 10 games to pull within onehalf game of first-place Aberdeen in the McNamara Division race, were up 3-1 after James Roche extended his hitting streak to nine games and capped a three-run third inning with a two-out RBI single.

But the Baby Bombers (25-36), enduring what will likely be their second straight non-playoff campaign after winning six New York-Penn League championships since entering the 14-team circuit in 2000, continued to relish playing the role of spoiler during Brooklyn's late-season playoff push.

Mike Ford connected for a solo blast off Cyclones starter Darwin Frias (1-1) in the fourth and Brandon Thomas reached him for what proved to be a game-winning three-run shot in the sixth, pushing the Yanks in front, 5-3.

"[Frias] had thrown (a slider) to me the previous at-bat so I had seen it a couple times," Thomas told the Staten Island Advance of the pitch he yanked over the right-field fall for the go-ahead runs. "I wasn't looking for it, but the pitch was up and I just reacted."

Desperately in need of a comeback of their own, the Cyclones managed just one hit the rest of the way.

Coupled with Aberdeen's 6-5, 10-inning triumph at Hudson Valley on Wednesday night, Brooklyn fell 1 1/2 games back of the division's top spot following the loss.

The setback also dropped the Cyclones to 5-6 against their Verrazano rivals this summer entering Thursday night's 7 p.m. showdown at MCU Park, which will be televised on the Mets' cable affiliate, SNY.

The Baby Bums have split the first four games of this five-game set with the Yanks, and are slated to visit Vermont for a three-game series before facing Staten Island twice more after hosting Tri-City

Those contests will all be crucial as Brooklyn prepares to welcome the first-place IronBirds to Coney Island on Aug. 31 and Sept. 1 in what could turn out to be the deciding factor in the McNamara title hunt.

Brooklyn is currently 6 1/2 games back of Jamestown and State College — the Pinckney Division co-leaders — for the league's fourth and final playoff spot.

That means catching the Iron-Birds by the season's final series, a three-game set at Tri-City from Sept. 2-4, is the only way the Cyclones can remain in the chase to capture their first NY-Penn title since winning it all during their inaugural 2001 campaign on Surf Avenue.

Gavin Cecchini beat out a double-play grounder to drive in a run and also scored once but finished 0-for-3 at the plate, making him hitless in 10 at-bats since putting together a team season-best 15-game hitting streak earlier this month.

New York to Vote on Length of State Judicial Terms, Brooklyn Weighs in

By Charisma L. Miller, Esq. Brooklyn Daily Eagle

The New York State Constitution may be amended in November to allow state judges to remain on the bench past the age of 70 — a change supported by many in the legal community.

Currently, state judges appointed to the bench must retire at the age of 70. This requirement forced Appellate Division Justice Anita Florio to step down from the bench last year. Florio began her term as an Appellate Division justice in 1994 — appointed to the bench by former New York State Gov. Mario Cuomo and reappointed by current New York state Gov. Andrew Cuomo.

"When you have been appointed by the father and then reappointed by the son, you know it is time for you to leave the bench," Florio joked at a Brooklyn Women's Bar Association event in 2012.

Elected judges, on the other hand, are allowed to remain through the age of 76 as long as they are mentally competent and physically able to serve. The proposed constitutional amendment will essentially allow appointed and elected judges to remain on the bench until the age of 80.

"This constitutional amendment is the most significant proposed change affecting our state's judiciary in 40 years," Hon. Lawrence Knipel, administrative judge for civil matters, 2nd Judicial District, told the Brooklyn Daily Eagle.

"It will be a double win for New York," Knipel continued, explaining that "firstly, the most experienced judges will be permitted to preside for additional years (at no extra cost). Secondly, taxpayers will save substantial pension costs because senior judges will begin collecting pensions at 80 instead of 70 or 76 years of age."

The present retirement age disparity often leads some sitting judges to run for a state Supreme Court position in order to remain on the bench until age 76. Brooklyn Supreme Court Justice William Miller ran for an elected position in 2012 for that every reason. "There's a mandatory retirement age for New York judges," Miller told the Brooklyn Daily Eagle during an interview after his election win. "I hope to stay on the bench as long as I can," Miller said as he turned 70.

The proposed amendment will bring New York closer to the model of the federal courts. The U.S. Constitution allows federal judges to hold their offices through good behavior, essentially allowing for lifetime appointments. For federal district judges, such as those who serve in the Brooklyn federal courthouse on Cadman Plaza East, Congress enacted the "Rule of 80" for the age and service requirement for a judge to assume senior status.

Beginning at age 65, a federal district judge may retire at his or her current salary or take senior status after performing 15 years of active service. As a judge increases in age past 70, his or her workload begins to decrease as each year passes.

As to the proposed age increase for New York State judges, some prefer that status on the bench be deemed by merit as opposed to age. "I would prefer a merit-based system rather than age and election," said Brooklyn attorney Andrew Miller. "But I have no problem with the increase in the age so long as it is someone who merits staying on the bench."

Knipel emphasized that the proposed amendment is "truly a win-win for New York voters."

Astor Heir Granted Medical Parole

An 89-year-old heir to one of America's earliest megafortunes has been granted medical parole two months after being sent to prison for siphoning millions from his mentally failing mother, society grande dame Brooke Astor. The state's parole board announced Anthony Marshall had been granted parole Thursday, a day after he was interviewed by commissioners. It was not immediately clear from where he was released. His medical parole release was effective immediately, officials said, and Marshall was expected to be supervised through June 20, 2016.

NY Top Court Rejects Term Limit For Suffolk DA

By Michael Virtanen

Associated Press New York's highest court ruled Thursday that a longtime Long Island prosecutor can continue his re-election bid, because the county where he was elected lacks the authority to set his term limit.

Suffolk County District Attorney Thomas Spota is not bound by the 12year limit approved by local voters in 1993, the Court of Appeals said in a 6-1 ruling. The 62 counties lack the power to regulate the number of terms for their district attorneys, who are officers established by the state constitution to enforce New York's penal law and should be subject to uniform qualifications, the majority said.

Spota faces attorney Raymond Perini in a Sept. 10 Republican primary. He also has Democratic, independent and conservative cross-endorsements.

"Permitting county legislators to impose term limits on the office of district attorney would have the potential to impair the independence of that office, because it would empower a local legislative body to effectively end the tenure of an incumbent district attorney whose investigatory or prosecutorial actions were unpopular or contrary to the interests of county legislators," the majority wrote. "The state has a fundamental and overriding interest in ensuring the integrity and independence of the office of district attorney." Chief Judge Jonathan Lippman was

Chief Judge Jonathan Lippman was joined by Judges Eugene Pigott Jr., Susan Read, Victoria Graffeo, Jenny Rivera and Sheila Abdus-Salaam in the ruling.

In his dissent, Judge Robert Smith wrote that he sees nothing in the constitution or state law preventing Suffolk County from limiting the number of consecutive years a district attorney may serve. "It is irrelevant that, as the majority notes, a district attorney is 'a constitutional officer' as well as a county officer and that the office of district attorney is a subject of statewide concern," he wrote.

Perini said after the court arguments Wednesday that thinks he'll win the Republican primary and got 4,725 petition signatures without party backing. "People want a choice," he said.

Attorney Kevin Snover, who challenged Suffolk County's 12-year limits for district attorney, sheriff and county clerk and won in trial court, said he was gratified the top court agreed that district attorney is a sufficiently important office from a statewide level that it would be inappropriate to have counties limit its term and so set qualifications for office.

Brooklyn Appellate Court Orders New Trial for Convicted Robber

By Charisma L. Miller, Esq. Brooklyn Daily Eagle

The Appellate Division, 2nd Department, has reversed the conviction of a man accused of brutally robbing an 81-year old woman in her home.

Eugene Thompson, the defendant, was "deprived of his constitutional right to present a defense," Appellate Division Justice Robert Miller wrote in the beginning of his decision of the court. On a July evening in 2006, someone broke into the victim's home and beat her repeatedly over the head with a phone. When the police arrived, the victim identified the intruder as someone who lived in the neighborhood — Thompson happened to be a next-door neighbor. Upon hearing about the incident, Thompson, along with other neighbors, came out to assist: Thompson brought the victim a glass of water and a rag.

While at the hospital being treated for her injuries, the victim identified Inderjeet Uppal, who lived in the neighborhood and who stood to inherit the victim's home when she died, as her attacker. The also memorialized identification in her diary two days after the attack. At the trial, the defense sought to introduce evidence of the victim's statements identifying Uppal and not Thompson as her attacker. However, the presiding Brooklyn judge ruled that such evidence was inadmissible, noting that the defense should have examined the victim prior to trial.

mechanism for preserving the testimony of a prospective material witness where there is reasonable cause to believe the witness will not be available for trial because he or she ... will be too physically ill or incapacitated to attend at trial." The prosecution argued, and the trial judge agreed, that Thompson's defense attorneys should have known that an elderly victim with a head injury, would likely be too incapacitated to attend, or testify, at trial.

Therefore, the argument continued, Thompson's attorneys should have deposed the victim prior to the trial.

Miller, writing for the Appellate Division, dismissed this reading of procedure, holding that nothing in the rules requires such a pretrial examination and that even if it did, Thompson's attorney's failure to conduct a pre-trial examination did not "establish an independent legal basis upon which to exclude evidence..."

However, the presiding trial judge did, oddly, permit Uppal to testify as to why he was not the attacker. The judge further argued that any evidence identifying Uppa the true would be repetitive and cause an undue delay. A "trial court has 'broad discretion to keep the proceedings within manageable limits and to curtail exploration of collateral matters," Miller noted, citing case precedent. However, that discretion did not, Miller stated, permit the deprivation of Thompson's 'right to present to the jury the fact that the victim repeatedly and consistently identified Uppal as her attacker.

JUSTICE ROBERT MILLER, Appellate Division

crime, including a bloodstain on Thompson's shirt containing the victim's DNA. The existence of such evidence did not take away from the fact that the "conclusions that could be drawn from such evidence were directly contradicted by the victim's repeated and unequivocal identification of Uppal as the perpetrator," Miller contended.

Therefore, Miller concluded, "the fact that [Thompson] was deprived of his constitutional right to present evidence bearing on this central issue [Uppal being identified by the victim as the attacker]," was sufficient to reverse Thompson's conviction and order a new trial. "We are thrilled by the decision." Thompson's attorney. Kendra Hutchinson of Appellate Advocates in Manhattan, told the New York Law Journal. "We are reviewing the opinion to decide what, if any, action we will take," said Mia Goldberg, a spokeswoman for the Kings County District Attorney's office.

Unfortunately for the defense, the victim could not be questioned at trial due to a bout of dementia.

As the court notes, trial and evidence procedure "provides the

"Those three offices are mandated in the same section of the constitution," Snover said.

When Suffolk County imposed the limits, it was done for other county offices as well. Snover doubted there would be a credible legal challenge for limiting any of the others.

YE ON REAL ESTATE

New Highrises, Hotel Downtown, More Changes in Historic Heights

Beloved Cinema To Remain, What of Plymouth & Pineapples?

By Lore Croghan INBrooklyn

Are high-profile builders Tom and Fred Elghanayan looking to make their big development site on Livingston Street even bigger?

The two brothers – whose company TF Cornerstone owns a bluechip portfolio of New York City apartment properties and Manhattan and Washington office buildings – are planning their Downtown Brooklyn debut at 276-300 Livingston St.

Last spring, Cornerstone paid $70 million for this parking garage with storefronts housing an IHOP pancake house, a Greyhound bus station and several other tenants. The developers plan to clear the site for 600 apartments.

Now, the word on the street is they've got their eye on a neighboring office building, 285 Schermerhorn St. It's directly adjacent to the parking garage, which is a blockthrough corner property with frontage on Schermerhorn as well as Bond Street.

The Schermerhorn Street building, constructed in 1927, belongs to a nonprofit with serious longevity, Brooklyn Community Services. The organization – which has been around since 1866 and has been known over the years as the Brooklyn Bureau of Charities and the Brooklyn Bureau of Community Service – is headquartered in the seven-story property.

The coffers of the social services provider – which began its operations with a shelter for homeless newsboys in Brooklyn Heights – would benefit from the nice chunk of change the building could command if sold as a development site.

There's 105,000 buildable square feet, real estate database PropertyShark.com indicates – which could be worth $200 per buildable square foot, or $21 million, a real estate source told INBrooklyn.

The BCS building has been drawing would-be buyers' attention since the parking garage next door changed hands.

"We had explorations from halfa-dozen different developers," Marla Simpson, executive director of Brooklyn Community Services, told us. "We're in listening mode," she said.

One thing's for certain, Simpson added: "We intend to remain in Downtown Brooklyn."

A source said BCS honchos are working with a number of city agencies to come up with a plan for how to proceed.

In addition to owning the handsome red-brick office building, BCS rents facilities in several Brooklyn neighborhoods. Programs serving more than 10,000 people each year include day care and early-childhood education, family counseling, job training and placement programs and help for people who are mentally ill or developmentally disabled.

The Elghanayans are keeping silent on the subject of their development site's neighboring building.

"At this time, TF Cornerstone does not have a comment on this," a spokeswoman said.

Their project is one of two mammoth apartment developments that promise to transform decidedly unglamorous Livingston Street and draw retailers priced out of nearby Fulton Mall, as we previously reported. The other is Doug Steiner's residential skyscraper at 350 Livingston St.

If you missed our story, it can be found at http://brooklyneagle. com/articles/livingston-street-exotic-offbeat-gritty-now-slated-mainstream-2013-06-21-160000.

The block where 285 Schermerhorn St. is located is a hotbed of development. There's the back side of 276-300 Livingston, where tenants have been told to vacate by Dec. 31. There's construction underway on the Nevins Hotel at 46 Nevins St., which has frontage on Schermerhorn Street.

Across the street, work has begun on a Holiday Inn at 300 Schermerhorn St.

PRIDE OF PLACE FOR HEIGHTS CINEMA

Henry Street is so fine. It may never hope to achieve the earning power of the Montague Street retail corridor, but it has a movie theater to call its own.

Now comes a pledge from the beloved Brooklyn Heights Cinema's landlord that if he gets the okay to turn the picture palace's 70 Henry St. home into an apartment building, the theater will not be relegated to the basement, with just a single screen and some lobby space on the first floor.

That was the compromise Tom Caruana came up with in February 2012 after his initial plan to demolish the 18-foot-high building and get rid of the two-screen cinema caused an uproar. In November, the design by architect Randy Gerner that was shown to the city Landmarks Preservation Commission was a new building with a mostly glass facade, 17 rental apartments and space for the cinema in the basement and ground floor. LPC chairman Robert Tierney told Caruana that Gerner Kronick + Valcarcel's plan needed "rethinking," and commissioners tabled their discussion.

Caruana will be going public with new plans this fall.

"We're in the process of revising our plans and submitting them to the LPC, addressing all the comments from the commissioners," he told INBrooklyn.

Asked what were the LPC's big concerns, he said, "The movie theater will be on the first floor - most of the first floor will be devoted to the movie theater."

Also, he said, "The most important thing is that most of the historical components of the building would remain."

Logically, that would mean much the existing building's facade of would remain intact and new floors would be added on top of it. But he wouldn't elaborate, except to say he will not ask for permission to exceed the landmarked neighborhood's 50foot construction height restriction.

Caruana - whose grandfather Giuseppe Zevola bought 70 Henry in 1968 through family company Ridgeton Poultry - said he hoped the next LPC hearing about his project will take place in October.

"Probably we will show the LPC a few different drawings," he said.

He said he might take the new plans to Community Board 2 as well, though he has already been before the civic group.

DO WE STAY OR DO WE GO?

Change is looming elsewhere on Henry Street: Plymouth Cafe may shut down.

"It's a 50-50 chance we will close," Peter Hong, who runs the sitdown deli at 90 Henry St., told IN-Brooklvn.

He and his brother Seung Jae Hong, who co-own the building, recently put it up for sale - and will clear it of tenants, including the cafe, if that's what the purchaser wants.

The asking price is $5.49 million for the building on the corner of Pineapple Street, which has nearly 100 feet of retail frontage and six apartments. Massey Knakal Realty

Services is the sale broker.

The deli has a following, with $3.25 egg and bacon sandwiches a particular favorite. Will his clientele miss him if he has to go? "I think so," he said. "I've been here a long time."

Hong wouldn't explain the reasons for his and his brother's decision to cash out of their investment.

"Any time is a good time to sell," said the cafe manager, who is also known as Seung Chang Hong. "We've gotten a lot of interested people."

The brothers bought the building through their company JCI Realty Corp. in 1989 for $594,000 from the executors of the estates of Louis and Bessie Weisberg, city records indicate.

Peter's brother is older and lives out of state. Peter, who's 53, is too young to retire, he said. He might start "another food business" if Plymouth Cafe must shut down. But it can't be on Henry Street, he said there's no vacant space to rent.

REHAB THIS HOUSE, PLEASE

When will the new owners of 113 Willow St. fix up its sad-looking facade?

It has been covered in ghostgray asphalt shingles for at least a half-century. Yes, that's roofing material covering their rowhouse which was built in 1829 and is listed on the National Register of Historic Places as well as being within the Heights' landmark district.

Renovation plans have been filed but the three-story frame house, which changed hands in December, has a "stop work order" slapped on the front door. The place is silent as a tomb, the front garden a patch of bare earth.

The single-family home sold for $2.9 million, city Finance Department records indicate. While on the ment of historic Heights houses have undergone facade restoration in the intervening years. A tip of the preservationists' hat for 30 Middagh St., which was built in 1824. Its impeccable gray-bluish clapboard would look good on 113 Willow. And also for 68 Hicks St., which was built in 1822 and began its existence as a grocery and tavern. Pale green clapboard now covers the house.

A final preservationists' shoutout goes to two iron basket urns that are perched on pedestals at the foot of the front stairs at 46 Monroe Place. They're one of a kind.

Lancaster, who had an awe-inspiring eye for detail, pointed out the pair of stoop decorations in "Old Brooklyn Heights" as "being a unique survivor of what was once a prevalent feature on the Heights." The 1830s-vintage house has changed hands since his 1960 survey but the graceful urns - which are topped with pineapples have been beautifully preserved.

These symbols of historic stewardship are especially gratifying to see on Monroe Place.

At the other end of the oneblock street, 8 Monroe Place was demolished, though it was on Lancaster's list of pre-Civil War homes, for use as part of the Cadman Towers apartment complex site. And the top two floors of 1 Monroe Place also on Lancaster's list - were torn down by the city in 2008 because they were deemed unsafe.

The building, which was foreclosed on, was sold in 2010, but it's still a mess.

market, its initial $4.5 million asking price was trimmed to $3.9 million, Brownstoner.com noted.

The deed, signed on Christmas Eve, identifies the buyer as 1113 Willow Street LLC. (Yes, there is an extra "1" in that number that differentiates it from the property's address.)

The LLC partners' names aren't on the deed and there's no record of a mortgage, which would reveal their identities.

Real estate lawyer Howard Brickner signed city Buildings Department filings for the LLC - but he told INBrooklyn he's a "manager" of the LLC as a courtesy to the new homeowners and the house isn't his. He said he would send his clients our about the fix-up plans. mey didn't respond in time for deadline. Online Buildings Department records indicate that interior renovation is contemplated but make no mention of any plan to remove the unsightly shingles and replace them with historically appropriate clapboard. Will that come later? An engineer has filed paperwork in an effort to get the "stop work order" lifted. It's unclear why the previous owner, to whom the house belonged for nearly 30 years, didn't get rid of the shingles. She has an out-of-state address and couldn't be reached.

BAM Installs Bike Lot At 31 Lafayette Featuring Mural

BAM (Brooklyn Academy of Music) will unveil a new BAM Bike Park and BAMart Outdoor installation on September 4 at 31 Lafayette Avenue, directly across the street from the Peter Jay Sharp Building which houses the BAM Howard Gilman Opera House and BAM Rose Cinemas.

An expansion of the David Byrne Bike Racks which were installed in front of the building last summer, the new park transforms an empty, underutilized lot into a new site for bike parking and creates a new platform for public art in the BAM Cultural District with a 20-footwide x 24-foot-h igh wall which will feature a mural installation by local artists. The work of Brooklyn-based artist KAWS will be the first to be featured in the space.

Combining a new amenity for cyclists with a bold new space for art, the BAM Bike Park highlights the constantly evolving landscape of the BAM Cultural District and raises the bar for future developments in the area.

"BAM is at the center of a neighborhood that is brimming with bike activity and we are excited to offer this inspiring new bike lot to our audience and the community," says BAM President Karen Brooks Hopkins. "We would like to acknowledge Con Edison for their generous support and of course our friends David Byrne and KAWS. It is our mission, as the home for adventurous artists, audiences, and ideas, that everything connected with BAM reflect our creative spirit and the David Byrne Bike Racks and KAWS mural are in perfect alignment with that philosophy."

Manufactured by Dero Bike Racks, the racks are made up of an interchangeable system of components which form letters and words. "When designing these bike racks," Byrne says, "I wondered how I could make something that was modular, yet variable. I realized that a few very basic shapes would allow one to make a good percentage of the letters of our alphabet. With help and advice from Dero Bike Racks, we figured out how these components could be easily and quickly swapped out to spell different words."

The new Byrne Bike Rack will form the words "Bold WinK." Leading up to the BAM Bike Park rendering. Rendering courtesy of BAM unveiling, BAM reached out to the community via social media to solicit new words for the existing racks at the Peter Jay Sharp Building. From the more than 100 submissions, the top five were put to a vote via Facebook to determine the final winner. The winning words were "wRY RomP" and "mo viNYL." The new mural by KAWS was created specially for BAM's inauguration of the BAM Bike Park and is the first in a planned series of murals that will rotate in this new visual art space. "It's exciting that BAM has developed this new platform for the visual arts and it has been a great opportunity for me to create a public work for Brooklyn," says KAWS.

"BAM is an innovative leader in the performing arts," says Frances A. Resheske, senior vice president of Public Affairs at Con Edison. "In keeping with that innovation, Con Edison is proud to help New Yorkers 'bike to BAM' in a unique collaboration. BAM's artinspired, bike-parking facility is another example of BAM's leadership in Brooklyn."

Pulitzer Prize-winning Journalists to Discuss 'Enemies Within' in Brooklyn Book Investigates NYPD's Secret Spying Unit

From Touchstone Books

After the 9/11 attacks, most Americans were prepared to tolerate a more powerful, secretive government that kept a close watch on its citizens. However, as evidenced by the debate raging around the National Security Agency's collection of vast amounts of telephone and Internet data, heightened security measures exact a price on civil liberties—and may not even be keeping the country safe.

"Enemies Within: Inside the NYPD's Secret Spying Unit and bin Laden's Final Plot Against America" (Sept. 3, 2013; Touchstone Books), by Pulitzer Prize-winning journalists Matt Apuzzo and Adam Goldman, follows the pursuit of Najibullah Zazi, a case which has been frequently cited by media, lawmakers, and administration officials as proof that government surveillance programs work and, through an investigation of the NYPD Intelligence Division's controversial security tactics, raises tough questions about the effectiveness of mea-

Six months after 9/11, New York City Police Commissioner Ray Kelly initiated a sweeping counterterrorism plan to be implemented by NYPD Intel across the city's five boroughs. A vast network of plainclothes officers and informants—known as "rakers" and "mosque crawlers" was dispatched into Muslim neighborhoods to "gauge sentiment." From recording sermons and eavesdropping on conversations at mosques to joining cricket leagues, infiltrating student groups, and chatting across halal deli counters, the NYPD would for years build files on huge numbers of innocent citizens, hoping to spot and thwart homegrown terrorists.

Yet, when it mattered most, these programs failed. Based on hundreds of previously unpublished secret NYPD internal memos and exclusive interviews with intelligence sources, "Enemies Within" follows the harrowing hours in 2009, as FBI agents and NYPD detectives on the city's Joint Terrorism Task Force, officers from NYPD Intel, ent across the country track suspect terrorist Najibullah Zazi-the single greatest threat to U.S. domestic security since 9/11-as he makes his way from Denver to New York City, determined to launch an attack. After years of spying, the NYPD knew where New York's Muslims were-but they still didn't know where the terrorists were. The NYPD's many secret files offered no early warning about Zazi or his two would-be accomplices, though the NYPD had spied on their neighborhood restaurants, their mosque, and even the travel agency where Zazi and his coconspirators bought tickets to Pakistan, where he agreed to join al-Qaida. This stunning failure led to a breathtaking race to avert another devastating terrorist attack on U.S. soil. "Enemies Within" asks "How safe are we? What do we sacrifice to feel safe? Who pays the ultimate price?"-pro-

Matt Apuzzo and Adam Goldman are investigative reporters for the Associated Press in Washington, D.C. They shared the 2012 Pulitzer Prize for Investigative Reporting for a series on the New York Police Department's clandestine spying programs targeting American Muslims. Together, Apuzzo and Goldman have uncovered the location of an overseas CIA prison in Romania, revealed widespread cheating on FBI exams, and showed how the CIA's haphazard disciplinary system resulted in promotions for officers who kidnapped and killed the wrong people. They have shared the Goldsmith Prize for Investigative Reporting, a George Polk Award, the Paul Tobenkin Memorial Award, and the Edgar A. Poe Award from the White House Correspondents' Association.

Everybody wants to talk about real estate. Everyone has an experience, opinion, building or apartment they want to discuss and share with others. If you think about it, real estate is the great unifier. Real estate is the common denominator that unites and bonds people from all walks of life because it is one commodity we all need. Everyone needs a place to live.

Just listen to conversations at the coffee shop, hair dresser, on the subway and walking down the street and you'll often find that it turns to buying, selling, renting or investing in real estate. New housing developments, the Jehovah's Witnesses' impending departure from Brooklyn Heights and DUMBO, and anything else that has to do with residential and commercial real estate are many times the dominant force of dinner table exchanges. The reason: real estate affects everyone, from cradle to grave.

And it's not just housing. Real estate includes schools, gyms, the post office, restaurants, the ubiquitous Starbucks, and the list of examples goes on to eternity. All of these places need a "home" to hang out their professional shingle. Often (I'd like to believe always) it is with the guidance of a real estate professional to help navigate and negotiate the way through the process of creating a smooth transaction.

My primary objective in working with any client is to find them the right place to live. It's not personal to me if they don't like the first dozen apartments we see; we keep looking and keep talking about real estate along the way. It takes only one, THE one, apartment to change everything. This is when the talking becomes silence, and the vision turns personal. It is when the conversation changes from real estate as a topic, to making this piece of real estate their home. But still, we are talking about real estate – everyone does.

On the Run

Speaking of the ubiquitous coffee house, real estate really is on patrons' minds while waiting in line (or, as New Yorkers say, waiting on line) for their grande mocha lattes. Recently, I was reminded that everywhere is an opportunity to earn a possible new client, and of how critical it is to present myself professionally even on line for coffee.

Before ordering my caffeine, I received a call from an agent I was heading to meet on the Lower East Side. We had a pleasant exchange. Those standing near me unfortunately were subjected to my one-sided conversation. However, it must have been slightly engaging to overhear, as a woman approached me after I hung up the call and asked if I was in the real estate business. She proceeded to compliment me on how she liked the straightforward way in which I handled myself. She suggested that her experience working with real estate people in the past left her feeling like most of us are slimy used car salespeople.

Then, the happy ending: she asked for my contact info and said she has a condo in Brooklyn she wants to put on the market or lease in the fall. She wants to talk with me about an exclusive listing and wants me to help her find her next home in a new neighborhood.

We'll see what becomes of this encounter. I'm certainly going to follow through on the possible opportunity. It just goes to show that no matter where we are and what we are doing, everybody wants to talk about real estate.

Brooklyn Launches NYC's 1st Community Supported Art Program

Putting a creative twist on Community Supported Agriculture programs (CSA) in which people invest in a local farm and enjoy monthly deliveries of fresh produce, a new program debuting this week gives New Yorkers the opportunity to purchase shares in exchange for artwork yet to be created by a curated group of local and emerging artists and designers.

Part of a national movement with outposts in more than 40 communities across the country, Brooklyn Community Supported Art + Design (CSA+D) is the first program of its kind to launch in New York City. Representing an affordable and exciting new way to collect art and support local and emerging artists and designers, Brooklyn CSA+D offers a fresh alternative to the commercial gallery system, which can be prohibitively expensive and daunting to many people. The goal is to build real connections between shareholders and local artists that will inspire new relationships and the potential for future purchases of artwork.

The concept is simple. Through a juried process, artists and designers are chosen to create pieces which can range across several disciplines, potentially including painting, printing, sculpture, textile, decorative objects, ceramics, music, lighting, t-shirt, collage and books. Shares are available for purchase at two price points: $500 for six pieces and $250 for three pieces for the Fall 2013 inaugural season. Shareholders will pick up their artwork at special event in September and October 2013 in Brooklyn, where they will have an opportunity to meet the artists and other shareholders.

Artists participating in the Fall 2013 season were selected from a pool of more than 300 applicants by a panel of jurors.

The initial six selected artists for the Fall 2013 season include: illustrator Julia Gaultieri, multi-disciplinary design studio Chiaozza, sculptor Katerina Usvitsky, multi-disciplinary designer Hannah June Lueptow, painter Evan Venegas and illustrator Niv Tishbi. A second group of six artists selected by the juror panel will be announced in the coming weeks.

Brooklyn CSA+D is cofounded by Brooklyn residents Dianne Debicella and Jill Allyn Peterson. Debicella is the senior program director for Fiscal Sponsorship at Fractured Atlas, the nation's largest arts service organization, and Peterson is a designer specializing in designing smart and sustainable home/office products, websites for socially conscious businesses and non-profits and strategies for public space.

"A lot of people want to collect contemporary art and design, but have no idea where to start," said Debicella. "This is a fun and exciting way to begin building a collection and, most importantly, forge a real connection to emerging artists and the local arts community."

Wherever you're going, you'll have an easy time getting there.
