SEPT. 10

Good morning. Today is the 253rd day of the year. On Sept. 10, 1910, the Brooklyn Daily Eagle issued its Educational Supplement, which was a guide to schools of all types throughout the borough. The supplement listed not only public and private K-8 schools and high schools, but dancing schools, business schools, music schools, colleges, law schools, pharmacy schools, normal schools (colleges for teachers), elocution schools (which taught people how to speak properly) and more. Social dancing and playing musical instruments were considered important social

Primary Day — What's at Stake in B'klyn

By Paula Katinas
Brooklyn Daily Eagle
Who will win the Democratic Primary? Will there be a runoff? Will Joe Lhota be able to fend off a challenge from John Catsimatidis in the Republican Primary? Will voters forgive Eliot Spitzer enough to vote for him over Scott Stringer to be the Democratic nominee for comptroller? Who will emerge from among the crowded field to be the Democratic Party's candidate for public advocate?

The answer to all of these questions will be known by the end of the night, when the results of the Democratic and Republican primaries are in.

The Brooklyn Daily Eagle would like to present to our readers a handy voter guide with everything readers will need to know on primary day.

But first things first: The polls have opened at 6 a.m. and will remain open until 9 p.m. You must be a registered member of a particular party to vote in that party's primary. And don't expect the computerized voting system that New Yorkers are just starting to get used to. Instead, the old lever voting machines are back, just for this primary.

In the race for mayor, Democrats are going to the polls wondering if there will be a clear winner or if there will be a runoff on Oct. 1.

Public Advocate Bill de Blasio, according to the polls, appears poised to win it all. The Wall Street Journal reported on its website that de Blasio had 36 percent of the vote. But the outcome of the primary was far from certain. A candidate must

Celebration In Bed-Stuy

Today at 10 a.m. at Fulton Street and Marcy Avenue, Bedford-Stuyvesant, the Bedford-Stuyvesant Restoration Corp. ("Restoration") and a group of public officials will host a ceremony to celebrate the completion of a $20 million effort to redevelop Fulton Street.

For the past few years, Restoration has supervised streetscape improvements, the creation of new wi-fi-accessible public plazas with public art and the redesign of Restoration Plaza.

These improvements were financed by a $20 million investment by the city. The neighborhood revitalization also generated an additional $91 million in housing and commercial investment by the private sector.

Real Estate CEO: Barclays-Area Landlords Too Quick To Chase Out Mom-and-Pops

While Barclays Center is a positive development for Brooklyn, many building owners in the area are too quick to price their small-business tenants out, hoping for a big payday.

So says Anthony Lolli, CEO of Rapid Realty, a large franchise-based real estate rental brokerage in New York with more than 60 offices. Lolli, who grew up in Brooklyn Heights and Park Slope, is also a special correspondent on Fox Business News and has appeared on The Today Show.

"As a broker, I love turnover, but I like natural turnover," says Lolli, who started out at a single location on Fourth Avenue in South Park Slope. "I don't like turnover coming from an increase of five, six times in rent that is unwarranted.

"We have 33 locations in Brooklyn, both residential and commercial," he said. "Why does this concern us as realtors? They're [the owners] not leaving room for negotiations.

"If you're being a tough negotiator, you're not a good negotiator. The owners in the area have this fictitious impression about the revenues that local businesses are getting from Barclays.

"They are making the strip radioactive," he continued.

'Toast of Brooklyn' To Honor Mandela

Nelson Mandela will be honored at the "2013 Toast of Brooklyn — Wine and Food Festival" VIP Reception that will be held from 6 to 9 p.m. on Friday, Sept. 13 and at the festival itself on Saturday, Sept. 14.

The festival will be held outdoors at Bed-Stuy Restoration's West Plaza Courtyard at 1368 Fulton St. It will be presented by the Bedford-Stuyvesant Gateway Business Improvement District (The BID) and The Bedford-Stuyvesant Restoration Corporation (BSRC).

The purpose of the festival is to feature fine wine and spirit companies, specialty restaurants and some of the the best talent in Brooklyn. The festival was created as a "Toast to Bed-Stuy" in 2009. This year's event embraces all of Brooklyn and is expected to host over 3,500 participants.

In partnership with iSee Promotions LLC, more than 50 wines and culinary chefs and experts will participate.

The festival will kick off with a VIP reception honoring Nelson Mandela for his humanitarianism and social activism. House of Mandela Wines, represented by his daughter Dr.

Makaziwe Mandela and granddaughter Tukwini Mandela, will receive the award on his behalf. A number of local leaders will also be recognized for their commitment to the community and specifically the Bed-Stuy BID.

Patrons will also be able to appreciate the amazing artwork of Brooklyn's own internationally renowned artist, Danny

Nets to Retire Kidd's No. 5

From Associated Press

The Brooklyn Nets will retire the No. 5 jersey of Jason Kidd, who led the franchise to its greatest NBA success as a player and is now its coach.

The Nets said Monday the ceremony will take place Oct. 17 before their preseason game against the Miami Heat.

Kidd led the New Jersey Nets to the 2002 and 2003 NBA Finals and is their career leader in numerous statistical categories. He ended his 19-year playing career after spending last season with the New York Knicks, and the Nets hired him as their coach in June.

get at least 40 percent of the vote in order to win the primary. If no one captures at least 40 percent, then a runoff will take place on Oct. 1 between the top two vote-getters. The winner of the runoff will be the Democratic candidate for mayor.

Council Speaker Christine Quinn and former comptroller Bill Thompson have been running neck-and-neck for second place, according to most polls.

A Republican lawmaker told the Brooklyn Daily Eagle on Monday morning that most people in the GOP believe Thompson, not de Blasio, would be the most formidable foe for a Republican candidate to have to go up against in the general election. "Thompson seems the most reasonable of that group," the official said.

The other candidates — former congressman Anthony Weiner, Comptroller John Liu, former Bay Ridge councilman Sal Albanese and Erick Salgado, a church pastor in Bensonhurst, were busy all day Monday, making last-ditch efforts to win supporters.

On the Republican side of the fence, Joe Lhota, a former deputy mayor and former Metropolitan Transportation Authority chairman, appears to have a comfortable lead in the polls over his rival, billionaire political newcomer John Catsimatidis. But Catsimatidis, the founder of the Gristedes supermarket chain, isn't ready to concede anything.

The third Republican candidate is George McDonald, founder of the Doe Fund, a nonprofit organization that helps homeless people find jobs. He was far behind in the polls as primary day approached.

The primary for city comptroller is playing out like a tale of redemption. Former governor Eliot Spitzer, who resigned in disgrace three years ago after being caught in a prostitution scandal, is trying for a political comeback. Spitzer is running against Manhattan Borough President Scott Stringer. Stringer's television ads have sought to remind voters of the Spitzer sex scandal. Spitzer has fired back in his ads, charging that Stringer is a political hack.

The crowded field for public advocate includes two current lawmakers, a college professor, a former deputy to Bill de Blasio and a community liaison for the Police Department.

State Sen. Daniel Squadron (D-Brooklyn Heights-DUMBO-Lower Manhattan) and Councilwoman Letitia James (D-Fort Greene-Clinton Hill) are looking to move to the position. Another candidate, Cathy Guerriero, a professor of education and politics at Teachers College at Columbia University, shocked the political establishment in June when she placed a close second to James in the first poll taken in the race.

Squadron, James and Guerriero all have close ties to Brooklyn. Squadron and James live here and represent parts of the borough. Guerriero grew up in Gravesend.

Reshma Saujani, former deputy public advocate, is hoping her experience in the office will impress voters. The fifth candidate, Sidique Wai, is president of the United African Congress and works for the NYPD as an advisor to Police Commissioner Raymond Kelly.

Brooklyn Democrats will also have to decide if District Attorney Charles Hynes deserves another term in office or if former federal prosecutor Ken Thompson should be the new district attorney.

In council races around the borough: Laurie Cumbo, a businesswoman with a background in the arts, is one of several candidates seeking to succeed James in the 35th Council District. The field in the Democratic primary for that district also includes district leader Ola Alabi; Ede Fox, the former chief of staff for Councilman Jumaane Williams (D-Flatbush); and Jelani Mashariki, the founder of Black Veterans for Social Justice.

With Councilman Domenic Recchia term-limited, a seat is opening up in the 47th Council District (Coney Island-Gravesend-Bensonhurst). The race to be the Democratic party's nominee features Mark Treyger, a high school teacher and political activist; John Lysanskiy, a City Council aide; Todd Dobrin, a Coney Island activist; and Pastor Connis Mobley, a religious and civic leader in Coney Island.

The race to succeed term-limited Councilman Michael Nelson (D-Sheepshead Bay-Brighton Beach) has several candidates running in the Democratic Primary. Chaim Deutsch is an aide to Nelson. Theresa Scavo is chairwoman of Community Board 15. Igor Obermann is president of the board of directors at Trump Village. Ari Kagan, a journalist, is the Democratic district leader in Sheepshead Bay.

In the 33rd Council District (Williamsburg-Greenpoint), freshman councilwoman Stephen Levin is seeking to fend off a challenge from Stephen Pierson, founder of an arts-centered after-school program.

Councilwoman Sara Gonzalez (D-Sunset Park-Red Hook) is facing a challenge from Carlos Menchaca in the primary. Gonzalez, who has represented the 38th Council District since 2001, would have the most seniority on the council if she defeats Menchaca in the primary and goes on to win the general election in November.

Brooklyn's Oldest Community Chorus Holds Auditions

Do you sing in the shower? Do you miss those karaoke nights? The Brooklyn Philharmonia Chorus, the borough's oldest community chorus, is looking for new singers.

The chorus is holding open auditions for its 58th year beginning on Tuesday, Sept. 10 at 7:30 p.m. They will continue on Tuesdays, Sept. 17, 24 and Oct. 1 at First Presbyterian Church, 124 Henry St. in Brooklyn Heights.

"We welcome anyone who has an interest in singing the great composers and more, in joining us," says Choral Director Doug March.

The chorus rehearses on Tuesdays from 7:30 to 10:00 p.m. (with a 15-minute refreshment break) with easy access by subway — one block from the Clark Street stop on 2, 3 trains and a few blocks from Borough Hall stop on 4, 5, and R trains.

The program for the Winter 2013 concert includes Handel's Messiah and other holiday favorites.

"We are a volunteer, community-based, non-profit group whose purpose is to perform great choral works. Our membership is representative of many different ethnic, racial, and cultural groups and, indeed, reflects the great diversity of Brooklyn, as do the audiences attending our concerts," says March. "The chorus offers singers the opportunity to perform musical compositions accompanied by class 'A' professional musicians and soloists at our concerts."

The chorus also offers free tickets to middle school and high school students, and invites high school and college music students to join, he says.

For more information about the chorus, visit www.brooklynphilharmoniachorus.org or send an e-mail to brooklynphorus@yahoo.com or call (718) 907-0963.

Simmons. Simmons is the brother of Hip Hop mogul Russell Simmons. Admission tickets for both days, including this exclusive Friday VIP Reception, are $75.

The Saturday festival will include wine and food tastings, cooking demonstrations and live music featuring jazz, soul, and other genres from a variety of artists. Arts and crafts from local artists will also be available.

"We bring sophisticated events to our community to show what we have to offer in our neighborhood back yard. When we have organized this event in the past, it was very successful and this year we are engaging more companies and expecting a larger crowd," said Edmon Braithwaite, founder of 2013 Toast of Brooklyn and owner of Nostrand Wines and Liquors.

The festival also provides an opportunity for companies and corporations to give back to the community. In the past, the festival raised $23,000 to give scholarships to underprivileged youth in Bed-Stuy.

"They're asking big-box retail rents from small mom-and-pop locations."

Business stemming from events at Barclays, he said, will spike on certain days, "but it's not an ongoing business. The problem is that Barclays has great food vendors, and people fill up there."

In addition, he said, local business owners haven't done enough promotion to steer Nets fans and concert-goers to places outside. "When you walk out, all you're looking at is Pathmark and Modell's. There's no channel to steer people elsewhere."

Reminded that in other parts of the city, small business are also being pushed out by rising rents, Lolli said, "Here's how this is different. Elsewhere in the city, the pushing-out is a slow, organic happening based on real facts and real data. I own an office in Chelsea, and I can understand the rising rents. I can see popular brands coming into the area."

In the area near Barclays, however, these rising rents are based on a "fictitious assumption," according to Lolli. "At the end of the day, they're [landlords] going to get bit by the vacancy."

Was She or Wasn't She?

ICHOCAN, PERU — Spell Amy Camus backwards and what do you get? Yma Sumac. She was born on September 10, 1922. It does seem authentic that she was born in Ichocan, Peru, but it has long been rumored that Yma was born Amy Camus in Brooklyn and grew up here. One source, The Motion Picture Guide (by CineBooks), in a review of one of her movies, states that she was a Brooklynite posing as a Peruvian. Her publicity agents claimed she was an Incan princess, a direct descendent from Athualpa, the last emperor of the Inca Empire.

Yma Sumac, Brooklynite

In any case her talent as a singer cannot be denied. Her five-octave voice ranges from popular to operatic. Her first record album "Voice of the Xtabay" for Capital was a big hit and over the years Capital sold over 4,000,000 of her recordings. "The Nightingale of the Andes" performed at Carnegie Hall and at the Hollywood Bowl. In 1954 she was featured in a Charlton Heston movie Secret of the Incas and the 1957 movie Omar Khayyam. She married a composer, Moises Vivanco, at the age of 14, and one of her hits was "Virgin of the Sun God." He wrote many of her songs.

Yma left the U.S. in 1968 to reside in Lima, Peru, but made an American comeback in 1975 with an engagement at the Chateau Madrid in Manhattan and sellout performances at Town Hall.

She was a bit thicker of figure and even though the NY Times gave her a favorable review they did say "Her voice lacks resiliency now and is far less controlled."

We assume she is in retirement now back home in Peru (or maybe Brooklyn?)

BROOKLYN — We like to boast about all the famous and successful people who have been born and/or lived in Brooklyn. Thanks to research by the late Dennis Holt we know that Isaac Funk lived at 196 Schermerhorn in the late 1880s. Funk was born in Clinton, Ohio on September 10, 1839. Funk entered the publishing business in 1876, when he founded the firm of I.K. Funk & Company in Manhattan. The American publisher Adam Willis Wagnalls became his partner in 1877, and he and Funk founded the Funk & Wagnalls Company in 1891. As Funk and Wagnalls they published their famous encyclopedia and dictionary by that name. Funk also founded the Literary Digest, a periodical, in 1890. He was the editor of A Standard Dictionary of the English Language (1890-91) and chairman of the editorial board of the Jewish Encyclopedia (12 vol., 1901-06). Funk also wrote books and edited periodicals dealing with his four principal interests: theology, prohibition, psychic phenomena, and a system of simplified spelling. He died in Montclair, NJ, April 4, 1912. An oft used line on the great "Laugh In" TV show was Goldie Hawn's: "If you don't believe that, look it up in your Funk & Wagnalls!"

Ask Anything About Brooklyn

Has Anyone Seen This Windmill?

Was there a windmill on E. 94th Street and Kings Highway in the 1940s? I remember a large field where there is now a large housing project. In the middle of the field was a windmill. A family member showed it to me when I was a little kid and told me that it was a windmill. The housing development was soon built and I can't find any information about it.

— Brenda Mellowe

So, I'm not feeling too hopeful about your windmill. I consulted with a few experts — Brooklyn Borough Historian Ron Schweiger, former Borough Historian John Manbeck and Brian Merlis, who published a book about that area in 2009. None of them have heard of a windmill at that intersection, which falls in East Flatbush close to Brownsville.

NYC plaque pays homage to the Dutch origins of our area. Windmill reproductions can still be seen all over Kings County.

Mr. Merlis's book, compiled with Lee Rosenzweig and titled Brooklyn's East Flatbush, Rugby and Pigtown Communities, is filled with hundreds of photographs of the area, including one of the intersection you noted, taken in 1928. The photo does not show a windmill, although it is possible it's just not visible from the angle this particular photo was taken.

Borough Historian Schweiger had this to offer, "I'm not sure about a windmill at East 94th Street and Kings Highway as late as the 1940s. In Flatlands, there was a windmill on the farm of the Hubbard family. It was on Hubbard Place near Flatbush Avenue."

Mr. Manbeck offered, "The last windmill was probably at the Vanderveer Farm, which burned in 1879. There was a dairy farm store on Flatbush Ave. near Kings Highway that may have had a model windmill..."

Mr. Manbeck's comment inspires an idea: It may just have been an ornamental windmill that stood by someone's home or business, and as a child it seemed much larger to you — as tends to happen.

REVIEW AND COMMENT

Syria: Throwing Up One's Hands in Despair

By Raanan Geberer
Brooklyn Daily Eagle

The other day, at a Democratic fundraiser, I happened to see a well-known congressperson. I asked how this congressperson would vote on the administration's plan to take action against Syria. "I don't know," he answered.

And if this congressperson, who presumably is privy to all sorts of foreign intelligence that the average person doesn't have access to, doesn't know, how can most people know?

In the beginning, we heard about Assad. Bashar Assad, everyone knows, is a bad guy, a dictator. He massacred thousands of people at Hama, a city that broke into revolt against his government in the early 1980s. He has helped the terrorist organization Hezbollah in the south of Lebanon and has exercised control over Lebanon that has, in effect, taken away that country's independence.

Assad is also close to U.S. rivals such as Russia and China. And starting this year, there have been increasing reports of Assad using chemical weapons, which are illegal under international law.

So, when the revolt in Syria happened, people in the west naturally thought that the rebels were democratic forces that were part of the "Arab spring." As the civil war developed, however, it turned out that many of these forces were not democratic at all, merely rivals. Even Secretary of State John Kerry has said that up to 25 percent of the Syrian rebels are "mujahedeen," or Islamist extremists. Some are reportedly close to Al Qaeda.

Many of the rebels also have atrocities of their own on their hands. A recent issue of The New York Times showed rebels forcing half-naked prisoners to kneel, seconds before they fatally shot them. Another report detailed how an Islamist rebel force set a Syrian Christian village on fire.

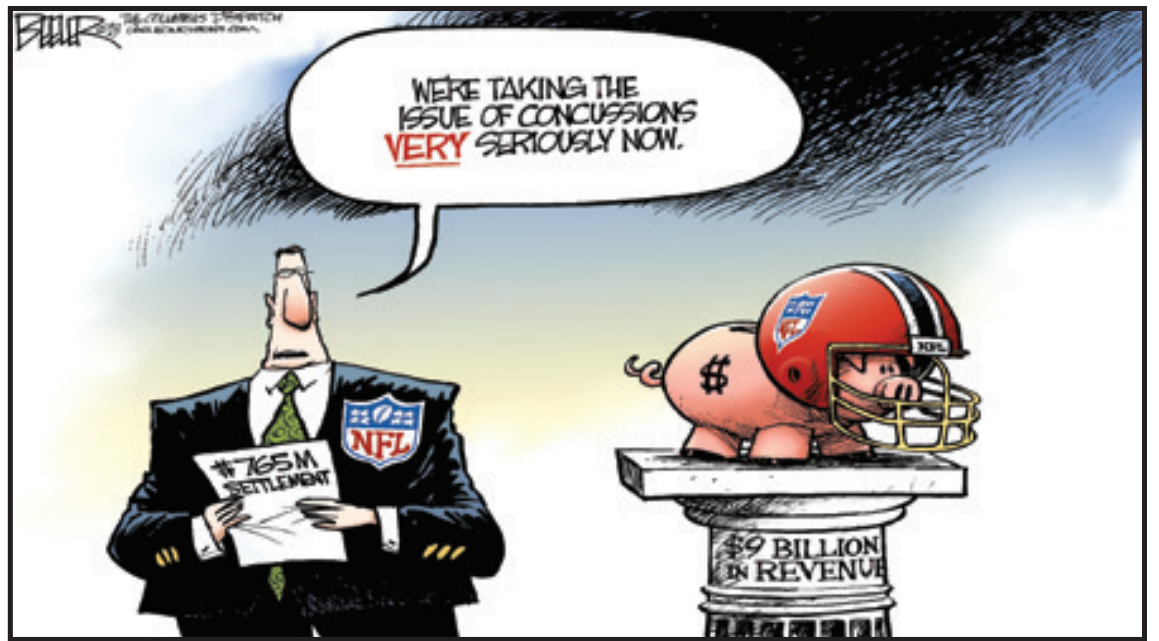

According to Amnesty International, both the Assad government and the rebels are guilty of human rights violations. The government is guilty of operating a network of torture chambers. But the rebels are allegedly guilty of not only killing civilians but cannibalizing them after they're dead.

The Syrian civil war is oddly reminiscent of the Yugoslavian civil wars of the 1990s – several small nations, each of them proudly nationalistic, warring on each other, taking on their revenge by killing civilians and teaching children to hate. U.S. intervention in the former Yugoslavia did cool things down there, but will they do the same in Syria?

It seems to me that neither side is worth the full-fledged support of the U.S. or its allies in the West. Clearly, something has to be done there. But that something, I believe, should be the job of the United Nations, not the United States.

I'm still not 100 percent decided what the U.S. should do about Syria. I don't like people who automatically say "my country, right or wrong" and support any U.S. military intervention that comes our way. But neither do I like people who are so hostile to the U.S. that they adhere to the "eleventh commandment" that says that if the U.S. and a foreign nation, particularly a "third-world" nation like Syria, are involved in a conflict, then the U.S. is by definition always wrong.

The Syrian situation is such a jumble of tragedy, violence and all-around bad karma that it would take an expert from the State Department, the Council on Foreign Relations or the Foreign Policy Association to decipher it. Until we have all the relevant information, the U.S. should not make Syria into another Iraq.

'Two of a Kind': A Story of Second Chances Author to Read in Cobble Hill

By Samantha Samel
Brooklyn Daily Eagle

Second chances can be sensitive endeavors, particularly in the realm of romance. And when both of those involved in the budding relationship are widowers, circumstances might be especially delicate. "Two of a Kind," (A New American Library Trade Paperback Original), acclaimed Brooklyn author Yona Zeldis McDonough's latest novel, deftly explores the complications that surface when two widowers decide to merge their families.

Image courtesy of Penguin Group

"Two of a Kind" opens with Christina Connelly, a Catholic girl from Brooklyn, who lost her husband, Will, to a fire ten years earlier. In the first chapter, Christina attends a wedding with her 14-year-old daughter, Jordan, and recalls her own experience falling in love and marrying. In spite of her grieving period, Christina managed to get back on her feet and build a life for her daughter in Brooklyn, where she runs a successful interior design business.

At the wedding, Christina is introduced to Dr. Andy Stern, a handsome widower who lives on the Upper East Side of Manhattan with his son, Oliver. Initially Christina is put off by Andy's demeanor; he nearly sneers when she says she works in Brooklyn, but she assures him that Park Slope is quite beautiful. Despite the negative first impression, Christina agrees to work with Andy when he hires her to decorate his apartment.

Gradually, and to everyone's surprise, Christina and Andy begin to fall in love. Blending their families is certainly a challenge, especially with their teenage kids who do not get along with one another. Yet despite the characters' inauspicious foundation, as the story progresses, readers will find themselves rooting wholeheartedly for the relationship to succeed.

To celebrate the novel's release, McDonough will appear at BookCourt in Cobble Hill on September 10. In anticipation, Brooklyn Eagle spoke to the author about the story's origins. She tells us about her Brooklyn connections and offers a preview of what she's working on now.

How did the idea for this story originate?

I need to hear a voice when I write; it's the thing that gets me started. In "Two of a Kind," the first voice I heard was that of Dr. Andy Stern, a kind of brash, occasionally obnoxious but a fundamentally decent and good man. Once I heard that voice and began writing his story, the novel opened up, and I began to hear the voices of the other people in his life: his son Oliver, still mourning the death of his mother; Christina Connelly, the woman who seems all wrong for him – until they fall in love – and Christina's daughter Jordan, who despises Andy on sight.

Why did you decide to set the story – at least Christina's life – in Brooklyn?

There was never any question of that; I knew I needed a place I felt was very familiar, whose textures and rhythms were known to me so I could get the details right.

Where in Brooklyn do you live?

I've been in my house on Carroll Street in Park Slope for over 20 years.

Do you find that your neighborhood shapes and informs your writing?

Absolutely! I love my neighborhood (and my borough) and think the Slope has a very village-like feel. It's good novel territory; it provides a certain cohesiveness that I like.

What are you reading now?

I am a serial reader, so I have a bunch of things on my bedside table at the moment: "Call Me by Your Name," by Andre Aciman, "Happy Any Day Now," by Toby Devens, and "The Wishing Hill," by Holly Robinson. All are novels; I read mostly fiction with a little poetry tossed in.

Are you working on any new projects?

Yes, I just sold a new manuscript to my wonderful publisher, New American Library. It's called "You Were Meant for Me," and it's about a woman who finds a baby on the subway platform in Coney Island—and keeps her! And guess what? It's set in Park Slope.

COWBOY CHEERLEADERS: The Dallas Cowboy cheerleaders perform before the Cowboys' NFL game against the New York Giants on Sunday in Arlington, Texas.

HIGH ROLLER: The world's tallest observation wheel, known as the High Roller, is seen behind David Codiga, executive project director for The Linq entertainment complex in Las Vegas. The outer wheel of the 55-story High Roller ride was hoisted into place on Monday.

BAY AREA WILDFIRE: A wildfire burns out of control on the slopes of Mount Diablo in Contra Costa County, Calif. By nightfall on Sunday it had surged to 800 acres, spewing a plume of smoke visible for miles and leading to the evacuation of 50 to 75 homes in Clayton, a town of about 11,000 people.

THE BIG BOARD: Specialist Frank Masiello works at his post on the floor of the New York Stock Exchange. U.S. stock futures were rising on Monday on promising economic data out from Asia.

MOUSTACHE COMPETITION: Ian Stetler of Lake Station, Indiana, struts his stuff during a parade through the French Quarter, kicking off the fourth annual Just For Men National Beard and Moustache Championships in New Orleans. Stetler competed in the Dali division. Contestants competed in 18 different categories including Dali, full-beard natural and sideburns. AP Photos

HISTORIC COVERED BRIDGE: The Cornish-Windsor bridge spans the Connecticut River in Windsor, Vt. Repairs are starting on one of the longest covered bridges in the United States, which connects New Hampshire and Vermont. The two-lane bridge is going down to a single lane for up to eight weeks starting this week.

NUCLEAR DANGER IN THE MIDEAST: Yukiya Amano of Japan, director general of the International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA), speaks during a news conference at the International Center in Vienna, Austria. Diplomats say that Russia is pressing the U.N. atomic agency to report on the nuclear risk of air strikes on Syria in efforts to stave off a possible U.S. attack.

RHINOS HEAD FOR THE HILLS: A forest guard takes position as a one-horned rhinoceros walks to higher land at the flooded Pobitora wildlife sanctuary in Assam, India. Assam is home to the world's largest concentration of the rare rhino. According to the Press Trust of India, 90 percent of the sanctuary has been inundated by overflowing rivers, forcing animals to migrate to higher grounds.

More Arrests in Brooklyn Massage Parlor Sex Trafficking Ring

Kings County District Attorney Charles J. Hynes announced Monday the conclusion of the second phase of an ongoing investigation into prostitution and sex trafficking rings being run out of local "spas."

The first phase was announced on July 11 and resulted in the arrest of 19 people in connection with the operation of 12 unrelated so-called spas and massage parlors in Bay Ridge and Dyker Heights.

In total, five "spa" locations were shut down; six individuals were indicted for running two separate prostitution rings, one of which was involved in sex trafficking; and six others were arrested on charges involving prostitution.

"I hope that these arrests will send a message not only to the communities of Dyker Heights, Bay Ridge, Brooklyn Heights and Greenpoint, but throughout Brooklyn, that my office shares their concerns regarding these so-called 'massage parlors,' and we will not tolerate illicit operations that exploit women and adversely affect neighborhoods."

The first indictment charges four defendants with Sex Trafficking and related charges. According to the indictment, the primary defendants Yun Feng Zhang, Yan Liu, Boxuan Zhang and Zhan Wei Liu ran the Zhang/Liu prostitution ring.

The second indictment charges two defendants with Promoting Prostitution and related charges. According to the indictment, primary defendants Nataliya Drevetska and Sergey Talko ran the Drevetska/Talko prostitution ring.

KCDA's inquiry into the Bay Ridge and Dyker Heights locations began after citizens living in the affected communities complained to KCDA through Community Board 10 late last year. These residents reported suspicious and disruptive activities in places that held themselves out as legitimate day spas and massage therapy locations.

"As soon as Assemblywoman Nicole Malliotakis and I received the most recent petition from residents and neighbors, we immediately contacted Kings County District Attorney Charles Hynes," said state Senator Marty Golden. "Cracking down on this illicit activity not only protects our community but also the young women being exploited," noted Assemblywoman Nicole Malliotakis.

The investigation into the Zhang/Liu ring was based on information obtained when one of the victims contacted KCDA in December, 2012. According to the indictment, a woman was assaulted and was forced to engage in prostitution at one of the ring's "spas."

The indictment charges that one of the defendants repeatedly kicked and slapped this woman, telling her that the customer is "God" and she must do whatever a customer requests.

The Zhang/Liu ring regularly advertised under a variety of names that offered massage therapy on websites like Craigslist.com, Backpage.com and Rubmaps.com. The name of the facility at 307 Henry St. was "Blue Diamond Health Center." According to the investigation, it was also known as "Spring Spa Body Work Station Inc." and "Spring Spa, Inc."

The 223 Cayler St. location was called, "Health Center Massage Therapy," also known as "Oasis Spa."

The Drevetska/Talko ring allegedly operated out of various locations in the Bay Ridge and Dyker Heights sections of Brooklyn. The "Beauty Connection Day Spa" was at 1275-77 70th St., and the "City Style Spa" was located at 8017 New Utrecht Ave.

This ring also regularly advertised online, offering "Amazing Body Rub. . . Unforgettable Full Bodywork" massages in Brooklyn. The ads also featured extremely graphic photos of scantily dressed women in sexually explicit poses.

"These massage parlors pose more than a quality of life problem for our neighborhoods — they harbor prostitution and abuse human trafficking victims," said Kathleen McGee, director of the Mayor's Office of Special Enforcement.

Michael Ryan, Rackets Division bureau chief, and Assistant District Attorneys Courtney Redman and Vineet Mehta are prosecuting the cases.

Unable To Supervise Wayward Child, City Requests Child Be Transferred to State

By Charisma L. Miller, Esq.
Brooklyn Daily Eagle

A request by a New York City agency that an at-risk teen, who has repeatedly run away from Brooklyn group homes, be transferred to a more secured facility has been granted.

Tilar M, a juvenile delinquent who has been diagnosed with ADHD, Oppositional Defiant Disorder and Conduct Disorder, was placed in custody of the New York City Administration for Children Services (ACS). ACS, charged with protecting the city's youth, partnered with the New York Foundling charity and placed Tilar M., in a non-secure facility to be housed and supervised. Tilar M., escaped from the facility and was arrested after being AWOL for 14 days.

After his arrest, and at the request of his mother, Tilar M was placed in Boys Town, a non-secure housing facility on 6th Avenue in Park Slope. Having left Boys Town without permission, Tilar M. was again placed in another non-secure group in Park Slope — this time the Boys Town Close to Home Initiative.

According to court documents, the Close to Home Initiative is staffed by a resident "married couple" who lived on the first floor of the house, and Tilar M and five other juvenile delinquents resided in bedrooms located on the second floor. Agency staff and the juveniles shared common areas of the house.

Tilar M was seen regularly by a staff counselor and was prescribed psychotropic drugs, but Tilar refused to take them. Attempting to escape, he was placed on a safety hold, which included placing him in physical restraints until he successfully escaped this facility.

ACS filed a motion in Queens Family court — recognizing that ACS and related facilities were "unable to consistently provide services and supervision to 'Tilar M,'" — requesting that the youth be transferred to the New York State Office of Children and Family Services (OCFS) to be placed in a secure setting.

Tilar M "poses a danger to himself and to the community, and he is in need of intensive treatment and supervision," ACS argued in its motion.

OCFS and Tilar M's attorney disagreed with ACS' assessment and assertions, arguing in turn that a sufficient change of circumstances has not occurred enough to warrant a transfer. New York state law requires that a sufficient change of circumstances must be presented prior to a transfer of placement or a modification of a prior order from Family Court.

Continued placement of Tilar M in an ACS or ACS-related facility is not "feasible," ruled Queens Family Court Judge John Hunt. Tilar M is "beyond the control of the agencies with which he has been placed, and his continuation in a non-secure setting will lead to further unauthorized absences with concomitant disruptions in his treatment program," Hunt noted.

"[Tilar M's] refusal to remain at the three non-secure agency facilities where he was placed by ACS, his history of running away . . . [and] his refusal to cooperate with treatment for his psychological conditions," established a sufficient change in circumstances, Hunt ruled.

Given the facts of the case, Hunt found Tilar M "a person appropriate for transfer of care and custody to [the] New York State Office of Children and Family Services for placement in a limited secure setting."

Gang Member Convicted Of Murdering Mother And 2-Year-Old Child

From U.S. Attorney's Office,
Eastern District of N.Y.

Following three weeks of trial, a federal jury in Central Islip, N.Y. returned a verdict convicting MS-13 street gang member Adalberto Ariel Guzman, also known as "Gringo," on federal criminal charges, including murder, conspiracy to commit murder and firearms offenses, in connection with the execution-style murders of a mother and her 2-year-old son.

At trial, the government proved that defendant Guzman carried out the execution-style murders of Vanessa Argueta, a 19-year-old woman, and Diego Torres, her 2-year-old son, in Central Islip on Feb. 5, 2010. The bodies of Argueta and Torres were found in a secluded wooded area in Central Islip. Argueta had been shot in the head and chest, and Torres had been shot twice in the head.

The evidence introduced at trial established that Guzman fired the fatal shot to Torres's head, and after committing the murders, he and two of his co-conspirators fled to El Salvador. Guzman was arrested on May 17, 2010, in Miami when he attempted to return to the United States.

"Guzman and his co-conspirators shot a young mother and her toddler in cold blood. Her crime in their eyes — showing 'disrespect' to their vicious gang. Her child's — simply being with her when the defendant and his cronies decided that she could no longer live," said U.S. Attorney for the Eastern District Loretta Lynch. "Few other acts illustrate so clearly the heartless nature of this criminal enterprise known as MS-13. Guzman will now be held to account for his allegiance to this band of killers."

The defendant is facing a sentence of life in prison as a result of his conviction. Sentencing is scheduled for Jan. 9, 2014, before United States District Judge Joseph F. Bianco.
